Riverview Commons affordable housing units in jeopardy

By Greta Cuyler

Andover could lose affordable housing units at Riverview Commons, dropping it below the 10-percent threshold that allows the town to have greater control over the type of Chapter 40B affordable housing developers can build.

Town planners and Riverview Commons have been working together to ensure Riverview can continue renting one-fourth of its units at affordable levels. But Riverview says a decision by Andover Housing Authority has caused rent reductions on AHA subsidized residents of up to 9.4 percent, which Riverview says it cannot continue to carry.

The housing authority says its hands are tied by reduced funding from the federal government's Housing and Urban Development.

"It's our responsibility to fund as many families as we can with the dollars that we have. Frankly, the rental market is soft throughout the town and the entire Merrimack Valley and we need to conserve as much as we can," said Christine Metzmaekers, executive director of the Andover Housing Authority.

"Certainly, AHA is very concerned about the tenancies at Riverview Commons. We will do everything in our power to preserve them."

Since 1989, Riverview Commons has been under agreement with the town to offer 55 of its 220 units at 650 Bulfinch Drive to people within eligible income guidelines. But since February, Riverview has no longer been obligated to renew expiring leases at below market rates. Nevertheless, Riverview and the town have hired a consultant together to explore ways of keeping the 55 units affordable.

"We want to keep the existing units at Riverview Commons. We want to keep the people who live in the town

Youth center at crossroads

AYF would delay work to allow for discussion of community center

By Greta Cuyler

The Andover Youth Foundation has offered to delay its youth-center effort in West Andover to see if designing a community center to serve Andover residents of all ages is a realistic possibility.

AYF representatives told selectmen Monday that AYF would put the $3.2 million it has raised for a youth center towards a multi-use center – but only under two conditions. Firstly, the center must include a youth component. Secondly, the Yvon Cormier family must retain the naming rights to the facility, which Cormier purchased from AYF with a $1.5 million donation.

The community center proposal comes in the wake of residents shooting down a proposed new downtown senior center at Annual Town Meeting. A community center could include additional space for seniors.

However, some seniors have said they have already collected 200 signatures to call a Special Town Meeting to vote again on the senior center proposal.

AYF is scheduled to break ground on its approved, privately-funded youth center on Ledge Road by June 2006. If selectmen are not interested in a community center, AYF will build a youth center in West Andover, says AYF president Larry Larsen. However, such a youth center would have to be smaller than originally designed because AYF does not have all the money it needs. Larsen has also talked about building some kind of community center in the downtown area.

"The West Andover location is fine. Building a youth center is fine," Larsen told selectmen at Monday's night's meeting. But he said the group "is also fully agreeable" to discussions about possible alternate locations and building a community center instead. AYF is willing to temporarily put youth-center plans on hold to discuss the possibility of an expanded community center, he said.

"We're not proposing, just

State: Investigate Shawsheen SPED

By Rita Savard

Alyssa Clark loves riding horses, playing with dolls and eating yellow Popsicles.

Watching her laugh with friends, brown eyes squinting into crescents as curly ringlets fall loosely around her shoulders, Alyssa seems like any other 4-year-old at play.

But for Alyssa's parents, Jeffrey and Lisa Clark, a perfectly normal moment on the playground can come crashing down quickly – like it did last week when their daughter fell down, stopped breathing and became unconscious.

Alyssa's unique special needs include a list of health complications. In the event a seizure should occur, the Clarks want to know that their daughter will be in capable hands, especially at school.

Charging that the Shawsheen School neglected to deliver special education services required by law, Jeffrey Clark, along with parent Bob Goldsmith appeared before the School Committee Tuesday night urging it to work with parents in taking action.

The state has ordered the school district to conduct an internal investigation of individualized plans (IEPs) for Shawsheen's special needs students.

"A special needs program can

ANDOVER HIGH GRADUATION

Jessie Shields, Jenny Diesk and Katherine Carter hug each other after Andover High School's graduation ceremony in Lowell's Tsongas Arena. There were 377 members of the class of 2005, according to Andover High.

Hello, class of 2005

They do not remember Ronald Reagan's presidency or the Red Sox losing a single World Series game.

But they were just a few days into their freshman year on Sept. 11, 2001. They have seen the world change around them.

They are the class of 2005 at Andover High School, and they celebrated their graduation on Monday. During a stirring graduation speech, Principal Peter Anderson challenged these students to show courage during their lives. Coverage of the graduation begins on page 25. Photos and an article on Senior Safari, the all-night party on graduation night, also begins on page 25.

Residents can find profiles of several impressive seniors on pages 26-30. Those who have won awards and scholarships are listed as well. The pages are meant to serve as introductions to the students, and as keepsakes for the graduates.

FOSTERS POND

Herbicide spread to reclaim pond

By Dorian Block

Canoeing on Fosters Pond just became a lot easier.

On Monday, a weed-zapping airboat zipped over the pond, dispersing poison to kill the weeds and make the water clear again.

Residents of the neighborhood, under the umbrella of The Fosters Pond Corp., raised almost $40,000 to remove the slimy, green fanwort that has grown from pond bottom to pond surface. To prepare, the pond was drawn down by a foot two weeks ago, the first time it has been drawn down in at least 30 years.

"I think everyone who lives on the pond is excited to use the pond more often and more easily," said Stephen Cotton, president of the neighborhood corporation. "It has become more difficult to swim in the deeper parts of the lake because you were getting tangled in weeds. This will at least temporarily give us our pond back."

Mark Florio, whose property abuts the pond, said he is eager to fish with his sons and canoe in a more weed-free pond.

"We go out in the canoe and like to explore, look for the painted turtles and the different wildlife that is abundant in Fosters Pond," Florio said. "But over the course of the past five years, there are certain areas you can't access by canoe because of the weed growth.

"The weeds are becoming more invasive, suffocating the channels in the pond. It will be a pleasure just to see the water again."

Fosters Pond is a 130-acre body of water with several islands and inlets on the southern edge of Andover. The town owns a 1-acre island in its center where the public can fish and boat.

In a neighborhood where home values range from $200,000 to $900,000, residents have willingly invested in what they consider to be "their pond."

Weed control was on the top of the agenda when the Fosters Pond Corp. was reinvigorated two years ago.

Forty-two neighbors donated $37,800 for the weed-control project. Organizers are still seeking donations to reach the $42,500 goal.

"In the last year and a half, the resurgence of folks that are interested and committed to improving the quality of life on the pond has really been quite impressive," said Florio who heads the weed committee. "The concern for the weeds has been a dominant factor."

Sonar, the neighbors' poison of choice, is the least-toxic aquatic herbicide approved by the state. However, its use will force a 90-day ban on using pond water for irrigation and, on Monday, boating, swimming and fishing was banned for the day.

Native plants will grow back after the poison is released but the fanwort will not, according to Aquatic Control Technology, a weed consultant hired by Fosters Pond Corp. At least 90 percent of the targeted weed is expected to die this summer.

Before you dig, call Dig Safe

Bay State Gas advises contractors and homeowners to call Dig Safe before beginning any excavation project.

Bay State Gas reminds all contractors and homeowners that prior to the start of any excavation project on public or private property, they must call Dig Safe to have the location of all underground utility pipes and cables marked. Project include, planting trees and shrubs, landscaping, rebuilding walls and driveways, installing swimming pools, building additions to homes, and installing sewer lines, septic systems and drains.

In Massachusetts, the Dig Safe Law requires that Dig Safe be notified at 1-888-DIG-SAFE, at least three business days before starting an excavation project.

There are substantial fines for violation of the Dig Safe Law. Dig Safe is a "one-call center" that will notify all natural gas, electric, telephone and cable companies with underground pipes and cables in the area of the project.

IN BRIEF

June 11 groundbreaking for St. A center to bring archbishop

Boston Archbishop Sean P. O'Malley will join St. Augustine pastor, the Rev. Bill Cleary, as the parish breaks ground for its new Center for Religious Education and Ministry on Saturday, June 11, at 3 p.m.

St. Augustine Parish enjoys a 150 year history in Andover and continues to be an active and growing faith community. Each year approximately 455 formation sacraments are administered. Additionally, more than 1,280 students are taught the fundamentals of the Catholic faith by 160 adult volunteers in the Religious Education Program, reports the parish office.

The vision for a Parish Center began a number of years ago when it was clear that the growth of the parish was outpacing current facilities. The center will be located directly across the parking lot from the church. "We will now have one central location to gather as a community in religious formation as well as to foster community spirit and connectedness," said Cleary in a release.

The Center for Religious Education and Ministry will house 24 classrooms/meeting rooms and an inviting assembly space with a commercial kitchen. The parish expects the building to be complete in the spring of 2006.

No Daher's in OTH

The annual Daher's Old Town Hall Shoe Sale and Charity Night will not be held this year.

Because of the extended school year, the store said it had great difficulty staffing the event with the additional staff members needed. In lieu of the annual sale, which used to be a highlight of Bazaar Days for many each year, Daher's will host a 45th year anniversary sale in their stores through June 18, with a 25 percent discount off everything in the store. Daher's said it will also host a large shoe sale, similar to the Old Town Hall event, at their Methuen store in early July.

Policemen's ball

Andover Policemen's Relief Association will host its annual ball at the Andover Country Club, 60 Canterbury St. on Friday, June 17. There will be a cocktail hour from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., with dinner served at 7:30 p.m. After dinner, Boston band Jude Crossen and Precision will play, with dancing until 1 a.m. The donation cost is $40 per person, with tickets available at the Andover Public Safety Center, 32 North Main St.

School transportation fees

Pay early, save $40 per student

The Andover School Committee has approved a student transportation policy that provides transportation to students in grades 7-12 on a fee basis.

The fee established for the 2005-06 school year is $300. Families with more than two students in grades 7-12 shall be subject to no more than two transportation user fees, or a $600 cap. Students who pay the fee in full by June 30 will be able to deduct $40 per paying students, up to $80, when paying for two students. If payment is received by June 30, the discounted price for families paying early is $260 per student, with a family maximum of $520.

Applications are being mailed home and are available on the Andover Public School's Web site at www.aps1.net Applications are also available to receive a free or reduced transportation fee.

Andover director behind Plaza Suite

An Andover director is tackling Neil Simon's Plaza Suite this weekend and says the play is different from some of Simon's comedic plays.

"This one is poignant with a bittersweet ending," said Penny Kohut of Andover, who is a founder of Acting Out, a local theater group.

Kohut, aNew York University graduate, says theater is her passion and has been working hard to put her group on the map. Its fourth production, Plaza Suite, is being performed at The Stage, 60 Island St., Lawrence, Friday and Saturday nights, June 10 and 11 (see Townsman calendar listing). The Stage is located next to the Essex Arts Center.

"We started out with just kid actors but we do it all now, kids and adults," said Kohut. "It's a group of people that simply likes to perform."

Solution sought at Riverview

■ AFFORDABLE HOUSING

living in the town. Displacement is something we're trying to avoid," said Lisa Schwartz, Andover senior planner.

Under the state's so-called anti-snob zoning act, developers can skirt local zoning bylaws to build affordable housing units in towns where less than 10 percent of housing is deemed affordable by the state. Because one-quarter of the Riverview Common units are rented below market, the entire development – all 220 units – count toward Andover's "affordable housing" total.

The problem, according Riverview Commons management, is that the company is losing too much money by renting its affordable units at the current rate. In a letter to housing authority dated May 26, Rick High asked the agency to reconsider an increase in funding of Section 8 certificates up to a state maximum of 110 percent of the HUD published fair market rate. High is the president of the general partner that owns and operates Riverview Commons.

High is unhappy with the housing authority's policy decision not to exceed 100 percent of the value of the HUD certificates on one and two bedroom apartment units.

"It's in our best interest to move the units to market as quickly as possible, but there are elderly and disabled residents living there and we're trying to be respectful of that," says High. "We've been working very closely with the town's affordable housing committee and planning department with the objective of retaining Riverview Commons affordable community over the long term. We think the policy of the housing authority is working against that."

"We are trying to work cooperatively to minimize the impact of expiration of use restrictions. We think cooperation is a two-way street. If you think of this as a bridge, we have walked two thirds of the way across," says High.

But May 2004 changes in federal funding for Section 8 vouchers have made it impossible for the town's housing authority to fund the town's allotment of 127 vouchers at even 100 percent of HUD's rate, according to Metzmaekers. The agency is only able to fund 124 vouchers at present and there is a waiting list.

"Corcoran thinks we should go higher on the HUD voucher. In the past, HUD would pay for them. Now HUD's funding is no longer based on the number of units, but on the number of dollars," said Metzmaekers.

Susan Stott, a member of the Andover Housing Partnership, says that committee has "been very focused for the past year on at least keeping the 55 units (at Riverview Commons) available."

Stott believes that the area's soft rental market, combined with low mortgage rates and anticipated housing-market appreciation, makes Riverview Commons a less viable rental development. Instead, she sees the complex potentially converting to condos in a move similar to what happened at Brookside Estates.

Affordable housing monitor to speak at ACT annual meeting

Andover Community Trust Inc. will discuss housing challenges facing Andover and potential solutions during its annual meeting next Wednesday, June 15, in the Memorial Hall Library's third-floor meeting room at 7:30 p.m.

Aaron Gornstein, executive director of Citizen's Housing and Planning Association, will head the informational session. CHAPA is the monitoring agent for most of the 57 new 40B affordable ownership units in Andover.

Established in 1992, ACT is a non-profit Massachusetts corporation. According to ACT president Susan Stott, the company's mission is "based on the strong belief that diversity is an important contributor to vital and livable communities."

ACT advocates for and develops permanently affordable homes in Andover, and completed its first affordable single-family home on Haverhill Street in 2001. The home was built by students at the Greater Lawrence Technical School, who are currently working to build a second home on Heather Drive.

ACT homes typically have three-bedrooms and are built to meet the needs of eligible households with an income between 60 and 80 percent of the area median income.

In 2005, a four-person household with a total income between $45,000 and $60,000 is income eligible. ACT gives preference to households with school-age children and with a member who works, lives or already goes to school in Andover.

State asks for internal investigation

only work if there is communication between teachers, parents and doctors," said Clark, fearing that the schools have severed communications with parents over the past two months.

After Shawsheen Principal Moira O'Brien terminated special education teacher Susan Fischer's contract in March, each parent with a child in her care sought answers over the decision. The school district's policy does not permit public discussion of personnel matters.

"We are the parents of special needs kids," Clark said. "Each of these kids has situations that change every day, making it paramount for those parents and the school system to work collaboratively. We just wanted to know what happened (with Suzy) and why it happened. We hoped the School Committee would work with us."

Clark's daughter Alyssa has ataxic cerebral palsy, a condition that affects her sense of balance and depth perception. She walks with the aid of two ankle-foot braces. Prone to unexpected seizure activities, Alyssa has had to make emergency trips via helicopter to Boston Children's Hospital for treatment. The Clarks want assurance that there will be someone with the qualifications and training that they believed Fischer had, to handle the situation.

Like other parents with special needs students, they also want assurance that services recommended by specialists to help their child are being delivered as needed.

About 27 parents who signed a petition to reinstate Fischer to her post believe the teacher was not welcomed back after telling some that specific services required by state law were not being administered. The school administration denied the charges.

Feeling "stonewalled," a group of parents filed a complaint with the Department of Education in April alleging that individual education plans were not being fully executed.

In response, the DOE ordered the school district to conduct an internal investigation and send back a complete report detailing findings by May 17. However, a medical situation forcing Pupil Personnel Administrator Susan O'Brien to take a temporary leave of absence from her duties, pushed the DOE deadline back until June 28.

"It's obvious the Andover School system does a lot of great things," said Goldsmith, whose son Mikey, 4, attends Shawsheen. "But the fact that the school has stalled and delayed investigations until the end of the school year is very disturbing to me as a father."

Goldsmith pleaded for the School Committee's help, adding that the schools do a lot for the best and brightest, and special needs students shouldn't be denied the same opportunities. Goldsmith also said Shawsheen was in violation of additional state regulations, including the use of space, and asked the committee if they thought the situation was acceptable.

"When the DOE asks us for information we take it very seriously," Bach said. "There are no shortcuts."

School Committee Chairwoman Deb Silberstein said the situation was unfortunate but she was confident that people were working hard to collect the information requested by the DOE.

Along with the DOE report, Andover Public Schools need to provide the following documents:

- A class roster listing all Shawsheen preschool students with IEPs.
- A list of services including the type, amount of time and setting in which each service is provided.
- Scheduled times for occupational and physical therapy, documentation that it was delivered according to each student's individual education plan.
- Names and copies of licenses of the occupational therapy staff responsible for services.

About 16 parents turned out at the meeting in support of Principal Moira O'Brien, prepared to stand by her side in case criticism was made regarding the principal's participation in a photomontage gift, featuring teachers posing in beach towels inside the Shawsheen School.

Before addressing the committee, Shawsheen PTO co-president Jay Lyons said his statement was in no way meant to minimize the concerns brought up by Goldsmith and Clark, because "they are serious concerns."

"Ms. O'Brien is an outstanding administrator who continues to exceed expectations in her role, always keeping in the forefront of her mind and displaying with her actions her never ending enthusiasm and dedication towards the education, care and well-being of our children," Lyons said, urging a return to normalcy. "We have all become very concerned over the last few weeks that the 'smear campaign' presented against the Shawsheen School community will have a direct impact on the perception and reputation Shawsheen has within the overall Andover community. Shawsheen School has been and will continue to be a place where educators can foster student growth within an intimate setting."

After the parents spoke, Silberstein held up a T-shirt she owns, that was signed by Shawsheen second-graders after a school graduation in 1995.

"There is a special bond between many Shawsheen parents," Silberstein said, reminding people that their most common bond, the students, can bring them together in a positive way.

Pupil Personnel Administrator O'Brien pledged that she would commit herself to resolving the situation.

"We recognize children have sensory needs," O'Brien said. "The thing Andover cannot do is use one approach for all children. Each child is an individual and we will always look at the individual."

While he hopes that officials are finally beginning to listen, Goldsmith said he is still convinced that Fischer would have her job now if she was not as candid with parents.

"She sacrificed herself for the children," Goldsmith said. "Our objective all along has been to get the special education services the state says our children needs and that the school delivers them."

Principal O'Brien did not comment during the meeting.

After the meeting, Lyons said he thought Goldsmith and Clark had presented an entirely separate issue from PTO's concern.

"They're advocating for their kids and we totally support that," Lyons said.

Joint center may be discussed

■ COMMUNITY CENTER

helping," said Hooks Johnston, another AYF member.

AYF currently has an agreement with the town to begin construction on the West Andover project by May 2006. If selectmen are interested in having residents discuss the joint center proposal, Larsen is asking the town for another one-year extension, to May 2007, to give all parties involved three to four months to discuss the feasibility of a joint project without hurting AYF's chance at a youth center.

"There are lots of issues to discuss," said Johnston, who encourages future discussions "to see if it's a viable idea that has any traction."

Despite the proposal, Larsenwas clear that if there's no agreement with the parties involved, AYF is fully prepared to proceed with the West Andover construction. "We're within striking distance of constructing a youth center," he said.

The foundation's current plan, which includes both a gym for middle-schoolers and a great room (for concerts and sound studios) for high schoolers, has elicited two construction bids over $7 million each. In light of the bids received, the AYF's architect suggested eliminating one of the larger rooms from the plan. Without the gym, the building will cost about $3.3 million, and without the great room, about $3.5 million.

The community center idea did not sit well with Andover resident Mary Carbone. "The youth don't want to be with the seniors, and respectfully, the seniors don't want to be with the youth," she said. "As a senior member, I really am offended. They (AYF) have taken what the seniors have worked on and used it for their own purposes."

Selectman Brian Major has been meeting with other residents in town to discuss the idea of a community center. Carbone encouraged officials to "not be devious and have private meetings."

But Bob Pokress, also a town resident, disagrees with Carbone. "I think there are many interesting benefits of bringing the two groups together, by being in contact and enhancing each other's lives. I, as a taxpayer, would be wholly in support of that."

Selectman Mary Lyman wants to approach the idea carefully. "The next steps need to be well- thought out. I'm very concerned about the future of seniors and whatever we do I want to make sure that seniors are taken care of. I also want to make sure that the youth board, who have worked very hard on their plan, have a chance to see their plan come to fruition," she said.

In response to a question about why the youth foundation is offering to include the seniors in the building venture, Larsen said, "Why not do something that encompasses both? I've been a proponent of a community effort for 13 years."

The town's approval of an AYF-funded youth center specified square footage and building usage. One of the questions that needs to be answered is whether any future proposed changes will need to be brought before Town Meeting for further approval.

Selectmen plan to revisit the topic of a community center at their June 29 meeting. They agree that future discussions need to include not only the youth foundation, but also youth, senior and community representatives.

SAYING GOODBYE

Twenty longtime educators are expected to retire this year, and tribute parties have already begun. Above, popular physical education teacher Dave Silva gets a hug from Maggie O'Reilly during his retirement party at Pomps Pond. Below, Doherty Middle School Principal Floyd McManus hoists a trophy at his Academy Award-style shindig.

Teacher: He has a rare gift

Doherty Principal Floyd McManus feted

By Rita Savard

When Floyd McManus raises one eyebrow, those who know him best predict two things are likely to follow: a profound statement or some homespun Canadian humor.

Either way, the Doherty Middle School principal's signature eyebrow action, "hearty chortle" and penchant for storytelling, keeps students and staff clamoring for more.

"By the eighth grade, students have heard all of Floyd's stories and even know them by heart," laughs eighth-grade English teacher Nancy Walke. "But they'll still ask to hear them again and again."

Celebrating their principal's 14 years of offering "counsel, combined with kindness, wisdom and humor," Walke and 160 additional educators, parents, town officials and friends gave McManus a warm send-off last Thursday at a retirement party. McManus officially retires from Doherty on June 30, after a total of 34 years in education.

Escorted down a red carpet, McManus received a standing ovation and was awarded an Oscar for his "outstanding performance in a principal's role." A slideshow highlighting some of his memorable moments – such as milking a cow in his cowboy hat – provided a pictorial backdrop at the event held inside the Andover Country Club.

"Working with (middle school students) has been the fulfillment of a dream," McManus told his supporters. "Professionally, I've been able to learn and grow and see many of my dreams turn into fruition."

During his tenure at Doherty, McManus was able to work collaboratively with Andover educators and administrators to make new opportunities available to middle school students. Since McManus became principal, each student at Doherty is now learning a foreign language and special education students are benefiting from a more enriched curriculum inside the classroom.

The principal's successor, assistant principal Bruce Maki says McManus had a vision for middle school level education long before it became popular.

Described as a "master at creating a positive education community," many of the guests at McManus' farewell gathering were parents of former Doherty students who are now attending college.

"He enables every child to find his or her own gift, and enables teachers to bring out the best in their teaching," says Nina Senatore, whose daughter is now a college freshman. "He sets a tone of excitement, talking to kids in a way that empowers them. Watching him talk to students involved in student government was like watching a president talk to his cabinet."

Jacki Barry and Mary Lu Walsh walk Doherty Middle School Principal Floyd McManus down the red carpet at his retirement party.

Habits like his daily visits to the school cafeteria, where McManus is known for grabbing a lunch tray and sitting among students, was part of the "magic" that made the principal approachable to children, educators say.

"He's never forgotten what it is like to be a middle school kid," says Janice Hill, whose two former Doherty students are also now in college. "Within the first two weeks of school, he has every student's name memorized. Students can sense his genuine concern for them and it helps them to emerge and be confident."

"He understands the transformation that happens at the middle school age is a launch pad from childhood to adulthood."

TEACHER NANCY WALKE

The role of an educational leader has changed tremendously over the years from overseeing the implementation of six subjects to about 60, says Superintendent Claudia Bach. But despite advancements that include "high stakes politically charged tests" McManus has always kept it simple, says Bach, while managing to gain the love and admiration of both parents and students.

Bach joked about the middle school student being a "little-understood, quirky, and socially awkward human being that only a mother or Floyd could love."

"I will (always) remember those times he would wander into my classes and the kids would clamor for yet another story about farm life in New Brunswick, and especially the trials and tribulations of his young neighbor, Bebe," said English teacher Sue Hutchinson, who, more than a decade earlier, sat on the committee responsible for hiring McManus as Doherty's principal. "He has always encouraged the members of his staff to speak their minds and give their opinions on any given subject. This, in turn, has made us feel like worthy beings with meaningful contributions to make."

Inside Doherty's main lobby hangs a banner that spells TEAM: Together Each Achieves More. McManus' faculty call the logo a metaphor to his leadership.

"He understands the transformation that happens at the middle school age is a launch pad from childhood to adulthood," Walke adds. "He has a rare gift, an easy and natural ability to tap into and hold onto a student's interest, helping them build a sense of who they are and who they are going to be. His absence from Doherty's halls will be greatly missed."

A Memorial Day to remember – Zoe Lyons collected hail, then enjoyed an icy ride on her sled (below).

Hail, hail, the gang's all here

Charlotte Lyons, of 4 Seten Circle, assumed all of Andover was clobbered with the same incredible hailstorm that struck her neighborhood around 2:15 p.m. on Memorial Day. But friends only a couple of miles away saw just thunderstorms.

The localized hailstorm lasted about 10 minutes and coated the area with enough ice balls that her daughter, Zoe, 7, collected the hail and went sledding on it. The hail did not melt until after nightfall, said Lyons.

"The hail was pea-sized, not exceeding 3/8 inch, but actually poked holes in large leafed plants," according to Lyons, who provided photos of her now swiss-cheese foliage.

Jarring usage

Use the phrase "town side" or "school side" at Andover selectmen's meetings and you'll pay- literally.

Selectmen Chairman Ted Teichert announced the new meeting feature at Tuesday night's meeting.

Every time someone uses one of the phrases at a meeting, the offender must put $1 in the jar, which sits atop the table during the meetings. It's an effort to promote cooperation, and a change in thinking. "We're one town," said Teichert.

All proceeds will go towards the town's Fourth of July fireworks celebration.

Marching off, in living color

Sometimes going from black and white to color can be a definite improvement.

The Andover High School marching band seems to think so, since turning in their "ragtag" black-and-white uniforms for some new duds. Unveiling their new black, blue and gold suits during the town's Memorial Day parade, some students who participated in the band's year-long fundraising efforts were able to don the new outfit for the first and last time.

Baseball, Italian style

Former AHS ballplayer enjoys active lifestyle in Parma, Italy

By Lauren Underhill

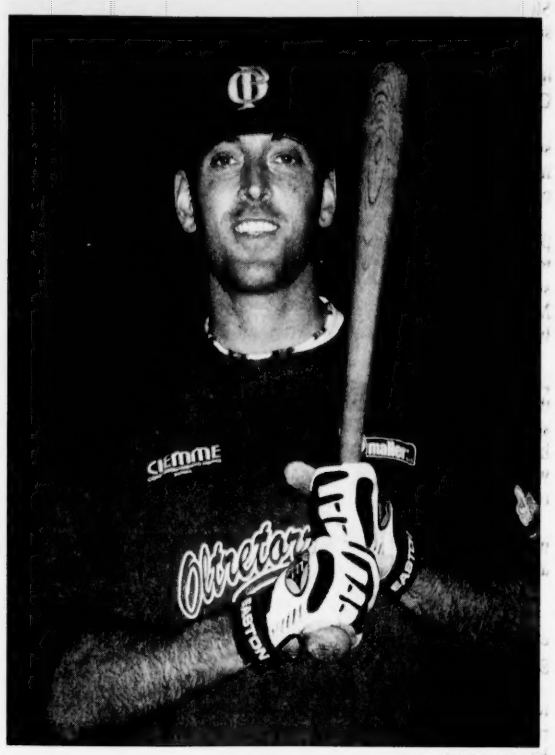

A TYPICAL STAY in Parma, Italy might involve a visit to the Romanesque Cathedral or the Farnese Theatre, but for Mark Langone, Parma offered a more unorthodox opportunity. Regular trips around the basepaths.

Langone, a former Andover resident, has followed his dreams of playing professional baseball all the way to Italy. He credits his success back to the days of playing ball with Andover's youth baseball leagues.

"I have nothing but positive memories of Andover baseball, as I was very fortunate to have played on successful teams and for quality coaches, which undoubtedly set the foundation for my baseball career that allowed me to play in college and two other countries," Langone said in an e-mail.

After graduating from Andover High School in 1996, the pitcher and third baseman played for Stonehill College until graduating in 2000. His Stonehill team's greatest accomplishment was in 2000 when they set a school record for wins and made it to the NCAA Northeast

'Citizens Who Care' recipients

Rotary Club announces 2005 awards

NINE YEARS AGO, the Andover Rotary Club noticed it was using the same two words for certain volunteers in town. They were the behind-the-scenes type of volunteers involved in numerous projects who preferred to stay that way – behind the scenes.

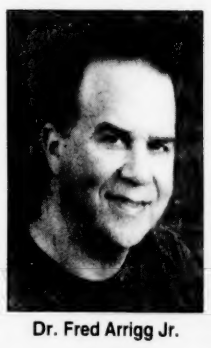

Local professional photographer Mark Spencer began thinking about what they had in common. He says it came down to just two words.

"They care," said Spencer, a nine-year Rotary member. Spencer set out to give these people some well-deserved attention.

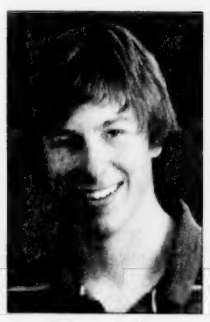

"They represent long-term volunteer efforts, some things that have lasted for years in town. But they stay out of the spotlight," said Spencer, who lives in Andover and owns Carriage House Photography on School Street. "This is a way to recognize them."

Baseball in Italy

■ MARK LANGONE

Regional finals.

"When that final out was made at the end of my senior season at Stonehill, I knew I wanted to continue playing baseball somewhere, somehow," Langone said.

His prospects grew when in the summer of 1999, he was offered the chance to play with other top college players for the Wareham Gatemen of the prestigious Cape Cod League.

"That experience, playing against eventual Major League stars such as Jason Bay, Mark Teixeira and Khalil Greene, made me realize that perhaps I'd be able to play some type of professional baseball after college," he said.

His hopes became reality when he received a phone call from a professional team in Moncton, New Brunswick, Canada. He spent two summers playing there. He tries to visit Moncton when possible because he feels like he has a family there, he said.

After fulfilling his dream of playing professional ball, Langone headed back to the states where he gained his MBA with a specialization in sports management. Itching to play baseball again after two years without it, Langone looked into the possibility of playing in Italy.

"I thought it would be a tremendous opportunity to move to Italy and experience their culture and learn their language," he said.

But this goal would not be an easy one.

"In order to play over there as an American, a player needs to be eligible for dual-citizenship and receive an Italian passport," Langone said.

After six months of paperwork and tracing his bloodlines back to his great-grandparents, who were Italian citizens, Langone received his passport and was on a plane by June 20, 2004, to Parma, where he signed a contract with the Oltretorrentes.

The team is an A2 division team, which, according to Langone, "is comparable to college baseball in New England. It's not as serious as the A1 level is, but it's still very competitive and enjoyable."

Without knowledge of the language, Langone was forced to adapt both on and off the field. He enjoys being the only American on the team since it allows him to become fully immersed in the culture.

"I have no fall-back option to hang out with other Americans," he said.

Aside from playing baseball, Italy has given Langone a new perspective on the United States from the viewpoint of Europe. He likes the laid-back lifestyle Italians enjoy.

"I thought it would be a tremendous opportunity to move to Italy and experience their culture and learn their language."

MARK LANGONE, '96 AHS GRAD

"One cultural aspect I really enjoy here is the active outdoor lifestyle, which differs greatly from that back home. It often seems like no one is indoors at certain times of the day," he said. Stores shut down midday and the parks flood with people enjoying the weather and the company of others. Langone views this active lifestyle, which includes a great amount of bicycle transportation, as a positive attribute Americans lack.

"Despite the quality of food here, Italy does not have an obesity problem, and this active outdoor lifestyle is a big reason why," he said.

There are few things Langone dislikes about Italy, but there are two things he might change: "One, the pillows here are awful. And two, peanut butter doesn't exist."

Baseball was introduced to Italians by US troops during the World War II. The game is played the same there as it is here, except a local team has nowhere near the following the Boston Red Sox enjoy.

"Soccer dominates every conversation and sports section here, and it often seems as though baseball here is equivalent to the popularity of badminton in the States," Langone said.

Langone finds it hard to follow the Red Sox in Italy, although a teammate who is a Sox fan helps keep him updated, and a Yankees fan is always sure to remind him of when they lose, he said.

Luckily, Langone's season was over and he was back in Boston last year just hours before Boston's emotional playoff roller coaster kicked into high gear with the first Sox-Yankees American League Championship Series game.

Langone considers living in Italy his "fantasy life" that he does not look forward to leaving after his season ends.

"It literally has added a whole new dimension to my life, as far as friends and the language and such, one that I never envisioned just two years ago," he said.

He doesn't know where he will end up, but says he has acquired valuable experiences and skills that will allow him to gain a "real job" either in the US or Europe.

"One thing is for sure," he said. "I'll be looking to come back here as much as possible regardless of my situation, as I feel like there's a family here."

Caring gets noticed every year and the exhibit travels around the Merrimack Valley. Exhibit stops include Town Offices, Memorial Hall Library and Merrimack College.

Spencer explained that Andover residents nominate people for the Rotary's Citizens Who Care project. A group of five Rotary members whittles down that list and each year, 10 people are selected. Recipients must live or work in the Andovers.

"We work hard to get a varied group of volunteers honored," Spencer said.

This year, 10 people are being honored, and the late Jan Sagaser of Andover is being remembered.

All will be saluted tonight, Thursday, June 9 at a reception at Memorial Hall Library's third floor from 5 to 7. The award recipients are:

Jan Sagaser

THE ARRIGGS: Dr. Fred Arrigg Jr. and his son, Tommy Arrigg, founded the Challenger Soccer event in town. Handicapped kids are paired with teen soccer players in town for a tournament. Tommy, a Brooks School graduate who now attends Bates College, was a Challenger baseball participant for years. He liked it so much he paired with his dad and brought the Challenger method to town soccer.

RUBY EASTON: The retired Andover High School guidance counselor worked at the school for 21 years. She's been a longtime advocate for various youth programs in town and 15 years ago founded the local chapter of Dollars for Scholars.

JUDY YOST: She brings a spiritual side to volunteering. A caregiver and advocate, she is well known in local nursing homes, hospitals and private homes. She is also musically talented.

ROBERT AND EDITH SANBORN: Both are in their late 80s and are longtime advocates for children with special needs. Town residents for more than 40 years, they founded and maintained Mass Child, a national program that supports kids with learning disabilities. They still volunteer, helping blind people with everyday tasks.

AL RETELLE: This one-time owner of Retelle Tree Services is a horticulturist by trade and has supported land preservation in town for years. He started the Conservation Commission in 1965 and was its first chairman. He's been a member of AVIS since 1960 and has chaired the Merrimack Valley Bird Club since 1967.

BILL PENNINGTON: A well-known school advocate, he has been a strong proponent of enrichment programs at South Elementary and West Middle schools. He helped create "The Zone," a satellite branch of Youth Services at West Middle.

PEGGY KECK: She served on the Planning Board for 12 years. In addition, she is active with AVIS where she has been a member since 1981. Helping AVIS acquire open land in town is her passion. In fact, they have just renamed Rocky Hill Reservation in her honor. It is now called the Peggy Keck Reservation.

ANTOINETTE FISCHER: She was a squadron commander and major in the local Civil Air Patrol and currently coordinates 25 cadets every weekend as they train for search-and-rescue skills.

JAN SAGASER: This late mother of six was involved in numerous volunteer capacities. She founded the Andona Society's scholarship program and hosted students from the A Better Chance program. The YMCA was also a passion, along with the International Institute of Lawrence. She died earlier this year.

■ COLORFUL BAND UNIFORMS

Virginia Hall, co-president of the Andover High School Band Association, says receiving the uniforms before the end of the school year was a plus because it enabled the band's nine senior students to march in style before heading to college.

"Remember the movie Pleasantville?" asks Hall. "It was a big difference going to color. Not only did they look great, but they sounded great too."

After months of student-run drives, and private donations from local businesses and residents, the marching band purchased 65 uniforms for about $22,000. Hall said fundraising efforts will continue until the band can acquire another 35 suits. The band is hoping to donate the 16-year-old black and white costumes to a community-theater group, but is open to suggestions and comments from anyone possibly interested in the well-worn attire.

A vote to can the ham

Bob Pokress is astounded at what he sees as a waste of town funds and an abuse of process.

The Andover resident questioned selectmen Monday night about whether any issue, no matter how trivial, could be brought before a Special Town Meeting if at least 200 residents sign a petition.

"So if I get 200 signatures to (have a Special Town Meeting to) designate ham-and-cheese as the official town sandwich, there's nothing you can do about it?" he asked the board.

The answer is yes. According to state law, the Andover Board of Selectmen have no authority over which issues get brought before Special Town Meeting.

There has been only one instance in the past 18 years of a citizen's petition being used to call a Special Town Meeting. But supporters of building a new senior center have reportedly collected enough signatures to call for a Special Town Meeting to vote again on a senior center proposal rejected by Annual Town Meeting in April. Pokress says he objects to taxpayers' money being used to vote on this issue again so soon after it was rejected.

Opinion

To the new graduates – students and teachers

On Monday, Andover High School launched another senior class into the world. Most of the graduates will find that they've been prepared academically for the challenges that lie ahead. They can thank their teachers – and their parents – for making sure they succeeded. They can pat themselves on the back, while they're at it. All of their hard work, all the tests they took, all of the effort to show up on time, will fade away into the mists of memory. But the graduates earned their diplomas. Now they're about to find out why commencement is a beginning.

Twenty Andover educators who, combined, have given the town hundred of years of service will also "graduate" in 2005, into retirement. The tributes and parties for these dedicated, and in many cases beloved, individuals have already started. We hope such events confirm for teachers such as Dave Silva and Chuck Wettergreen, and hands-on administrators such as Floyd McManus and Norah McCarthy that they truly have touched the lives of hundreds, if not thousands, of residents. Few people but educators can make such a claim.

Retiring educators are not the only ones residents have reason to praise. There are many educators who will return next year who contribute something special. Andover High School Principal Peter Anderson is one of these people.

Many graduations look alike. People give the same speeches in the same places, and everyone waits for the ceremony to end so the graduation parties can begin. But Anderson brings something unique to each graduation he presides over. He jokes with the students. He challenges them each year to do something special. He gives money to one student annually and demands they return in four years to say what they have done with it.

Anderson's dedication and connection to the students is on display at graduation each year. Fortunately, many students see it on display at Andover High School virtually every school day.

Web question

Joint or separate centers?

Last week's Andover Townsman Web-site question was about putting more soccer and baseball fields at the Warren G. Deyermond Field in West Andover. It said, "The town is trying to cap a former landfill on nearby Ledge Road to make room for more fields. Is this a good idea?"

17 people responded.

- 5, or 29 percent, said, "Yes, because open field space is scarce in town and it make sense to build fields near existing fields."
- 2, or 12 percent, said, "Yes. I do not like the idea of letting kids play on an old dump, but they have been doing it for years and it is not hurting anyone. We need the fields."
- 2, or 12 percent, said, "No, because I'm concerned about the area."
- 8, or 47 percent, said, "No, because I don't want to spend any more money in these tough financial times. There are enough fields in town."
- No one said, "Other."

This week's Andover Townsman Web-site question is: "Do you support the idea of a single community center in town to serve youth and seniors and others instead of building separate facilities?"

- Absolutely, yes. A town community center for everyone is a great idea. The town should be bringing people together, not separating them.
- Yes. It's a good idea and maybe the town can save some money by combining the two projects.
- No, because the youth and the seniors in town have different needs and we need two separate projects.
- No way. Both seniors and youth have been working on separate centers for years and deserve their own space as originally planned.
- Other.

Tough teacher prepared kids for real world

Editor, Townsman:

I was very disappointed to read Bill Gerson's letter in the May 26 edition of the Andover Townsman. Although I do not know the facts behind the decision, I do know he is the type of teacher we need in our system.

Bill Gerson has a provocative style, sometimes irreverent and maybe at times a little tough on the kids. He certainly will never be called "politically correct" (thanks Bill) and is not the type of person that will tell people what they want to hear. I happen to like that about him but I am sure there are a number of "straight laced" parents out there who object to his style. While I do not know the facts, my guess is all of this had something to do with the decision.

What I do know is Gerson gets his kids ready for the real world. He motivates, he challenges and he packs the kids with knowledge that will help them grow. In doing so he uses a style that might be difficult for some kids and most likely unacceptable to some parents. I also know my daughter learned and grew a great deal as a student in two of his courses. She enjoyed the challenge and yes, she learned – he made the course work relevant to the world today. I will take that kind of preparation anytime over the teacher who "challenges" his or her students to remember useless dates, quotes or passages requiring they spit those back on a test. While I support a broad, well-rounded education, I do condemn those who don't allow for some real world education as well, or accept a different style that usually comes with those life lessons.

If Gerson decides to teach in a private system, he will certainly enjoy success, and therein lies the problem. Our public system is not designed to prepare our kids for the competitive world because of the propensity to ensure political correctness. You know how the whining works, if one in a thousand doesn't like something, we change it for that one. And some wonder why America is losing its competitive edge!

Calendar and confusion

Taylor Armerding

I'm confused.

Was the spoof of "Calendar Girls" at Andover's Shawsheen School, featuring towel-draped photos of Principal Moira O'Brien and seven female faculty members, a good thing or a bad thing?

It's so hard to tell, especially when those involved can't even decide.

By now, the whole world – at least our little world here in Eastern Massachusetts – knows that O'Brien directed the creation of what was apparently intended to be a private, gag gift for a departing colleague last spring. It came to light recently through a local lawyer who has a child at the school and is representing a Shawsheen teacher in a discrimination suit.

And since it became public, most of the people talking about it seem to be inhabited by split personalities. On the one hand, everybody from Superintendent Claudia Bach down to other teachers and an army of parents, are saying what a great thing it is. Bach said O'Brien and the other teachers did "nothing inappropriate with regard to the creation of this touching gift."

Well, OK. I know, from personal observation, that these towel-draped women were covering a lot more than most females do at the beach in the summer.

Various letter writers have also gone to great lengths to praise O'Brien's skill, energy and dedication to the students.

But then, on the other hand, many of these very same O'Brien defenders are calling the fact that the calendar was made public "an unwarranted attack that was hurtful to the Shawsheen community."

Attack? How can the revelation of a "touching tribute" be an attack? If there was nothing wrong, or even inappropriate about it, why the outrage?

If this was really a touching tribute, everybody would love having it get wider publicity. They would welcome it – heck they probably would have started making thousands of copies and sold them to raise money, just like in the movie. Everybody who heard about it or saw the photos would be saying, "How sweet, how touching."

Instead I'm reading letters hectoring the local newspaper for even covering the matter, contending that any stories or photos were a gross violation of a confidence. A whole group of Shawsheen parents are "dismayed and appalled." Another writer said the lawyer who released the calendar was "fighting dirty."

Dirty? You don't say things like that about something that is touching and appropriate. You can't fight dirty with no dirt.

So I think I'm not the only one who is confused here.

Parent has no doubts about principal's judgment

Editor, Townsman:

As a Shawsheen parent, I had been feeling two emotions since reading the article about Moira O'Brien in the May 26 Townsman: fury and doubt. Furious that the Townsman printed a photo with the story. The photos were allegedly "risque" and therefore inappropriate – including an elementary school principal posing in nothing but a towel, and yet an "inappropriate," albeit personal, photo was made public – infuriating. Did the Townsman not take into consideration the reactions of Principal O'Brien's 250 K-2 students? Two hundred and fifty of Andover's young residents were exposed to the image unnecessarily and, in my opinion, irresponsibly. I'm not suggesting the story shouldn't have been covered, simply that the story could have been covered without the photo. But perhaps the shock value was more important than the children.

As for the doubt, after reading the story, I had some doubts about Moira O'Brien's judgment as a principal. I must admit that I was a bit uncomfortable with the idea that my child's principal posed for pictures in a towel, but I tried my best not to come to any conclusions; I wanted to hear both sides of the story.

I have received letters from both O'Brien and Superintendent Claudia Bach. Reading these letters changed the emo-

Spouse: Giving teachers simply tried to offer gift to retiring friend

Editor, Townsman:

Two weeks ago, this newspaper's headline was about the gag gift the Shawsheen School staff had given to a retiring teacher. I'm the husband of one of those staff members and I'm going to do something a lot of school employees' spouses want to do. I can't stay silent.

My wife came home later than usual in tears after she and Principal Moira O'Brien had learned the news of your story. She told me it was the worst day of her life. I had never, ever seen her come home from work like this before. My wife is one of those extremely rare people; she truly loves her job. For the longest time I couldn't understand why she wasn't working in the private sector where she could make three times what she's making now, but it took me a few years to learn how much I envy her. One example: she had jury duty a few months ago, and by 11 a.m. she was dismissed. Most people would go home or to a movie because they are already getting paid for the day, but not my wife. She went back to work because she missed the kids and her job. One of her highlights every day is when one particular special needs kid crawls up on her lap and gets to press the button for the door release.

The teachers, the principals, the support staff at the schools all have this same love for what they do, which is taken for granted by us who aren't exposed daily to their environment. The spouse of any school employee knows what I'm talking about. They don't do it for the money, that's for sure. How many people would spend their own money on supplies for work? How many would spend long hours directing a play? Who in their right mind would go to evening events (without being paid) to see kids who are not one's own graduate, receive awards, play sports, play an instrument or sing in a chorus? They do it because they love what they do. Because of the sacrifices they all make, they also have a unique camaraderie. It is a thankless, underappreciated job that they somehow rise above – and most wouldn't give it up if they hit the lottery.

So one of these teachers ended her career after 32 years and the band of sisters left behind decided to give her a gift that would bring a smile to her face every time she looked at it. They decided to make a calendar of teachers, support staff, and the principal in the environment she had spent the last 32 years of her life. As my wife said, it just wouldn't have been the same if they took the pictures in a kitchen or living room. One of the things that made it funny was because the photos were taken in the school. None of the children were exposed and the recipient was awarded with something she could look at over and over and see humor in the humility her peers were presenting her – mission accomplished.

Not so fast – Suzy Fischer, one of the staff who volunteered to take the photos, is now suing the school for not renewing her contract. She wasn't fired, or laid off, her contract was just not renewed for another year. That means she wasn't invited to come back next year. So she decides to give a secret copy of the photos to her lawyer – who I understand specializes in real estate law – who gives them to the Townsman, thinking it will give them leverage and embarrass the parties involved. I understand Fischer had promised the principal she had given her all the prints and the negatives from the calendar. This is the same person claiming she is being non-renewed because of her mental disability. She is also now claiming she was coerced into taking the photos.

There is another teacher at Shawsheen School who is suing for discrimination. She thinks Shawsheen doesn't want her back because she was pregnant and missed most of the year. I have my own opinion as to why these two teachers are being non-renewed. Maybe, just maybe, it's because they weren't very good teachers. Maybe it has nothing to do with being pregnant or having a mental disability.

As for the Townsman, the old "You should be ashamed of yourself" line just doesn't cut it. Since when did you become the new "Andover Enquirer"? For what you've done to my wife and all the other staff at Shawsheen School why don't you meet me out back behind the woodshed after school?

Thai student brought spice to town life

Editor, Townsman:

Two issues:

1. As the school year draws to a close, I want to comment on the kindness and generosity with which people embraced June Chongkavinit, a Thai exchange student who stayed with us. She made many friends and will take back memories of hard work and good times.

One of my enduring memories of her will be a dance performance, in which she and her friend Alondra Gutierrez, an accomplished flamenco dancer, argued with each other in their respective traditions. Another enduring legacy will be the amount of hot pepper and garlic with which I cook. I encourage people to join with our family wishing her well in her adventurous life.

2. Regarding the "scandal" at the Shawsheen School: David Gorman, a lawyer opposed to the school in pending litigation, chose on behalf of his client to publicize a prank gift that never was intended for general circulation, and whose untoward consequences – all issuing from media coverage – result entirely from Gorman's action. It is he, and his client, who bear the entire responsibility in this affair. Principal Moira O'Brien and her colleagues doubtless never conceived that someone with an agenda would choose to turn a private joke into a public circus.

Shame on Gorman for trying to advance his client's interests with a crass manipulation of the media and tarring innocent reputations, and shame on the media for allowing itself to be so manipulated.

Parent: I have seen O'Brien's dedication

tions I've been feeling since the story broke. Now, I am not only furious that the Townsman printed the photo, but I am furious that it allowed itself to be "taken in" by an attorney and teacher with ulterior motives, and, at the expense of O'Brien. As a parent I have seen O'Brien's personal dedication to her students; it is what makes her an amazing child advocate. The retirement gift, which included the photos, only indicates that she takes the same personal interest in her staff. So I no longer doubt O'Brien's judgment, and I'm sorry that I ever did. I am glad Moira O'Brien is my child's principal, but more importantly, my child is glad

OBITUARIES

Cornelius Ayer Wood Jr.

Services Tuesday for town benefactor

At this year's Town Meeting, supporters of a proposed new senior center were overjoyed when the Rev. Cornelius Ayer Wood, Jr.'s huge donation of $800,000 for the project was announced.

"He wrote one of the most eloquent letters we ever received in support of the center," said Selectman Mary Lyman, who is very involved with the Senior Center Task Force. "All members are thinking about and feeling sorrow for Mrs. Wood at this time."

Mr. Wood, whose family roots in town go back many years, died Sunday, June 5 at the Prescott House in North Andover, after a short illness. He was 84.

"His generosity at our time of need for the senior center was a moment where we were entirely grateful," Lyman said. "For them to take time out for others during their own time of need was another act of generosity."

His grandfather, William Madison Wood, was president of the American Woolen Co. and was considered Andover's most famous citizen in his day, according to files at the Andover Historical Society. Wood's mill empire was built in the early 1920s and provided housing for mill workers. The area was named Shawsheen Village and is still well known today.

Rev. Cornelius Ayer Wood Jr. lived in town and was educated at Phillips Academy. He received an S.B. degree from Harvard University in 1942, a B.D. from Virginia Theological Seminary in 1944, and a master's degree in business administration from American University in 1955.

Rev. Wood served as curate, at Grace Episcopal Church, New Bedford, from 1944-46; National Institute of Public Affairs (fellow), Washington, D.C. from 1946-47, labor and community relations program; executive secretary to Federal Security Administrator, Washington, D.C. from 1947-51, program and community planning; assistant to the Episcopal Bishop of Washington, from 1951-59; chairman, interchurch planning commission; and arbitrator, American Arbitration Association, New York.

Mr. Wood also served as director of Emergency Hospital, Washington; trustee, Penn Community Services Inc., St. Helena Island, South Carolina; and board of managers of the Bach Choir of Bethlehem, Pa. He was a member of the New York Society of Security Analysts, the Boston Society of Security Analysts, the Washington Society of Investment Analysts, and was past director and vice president of the Financial Analyst Federation.

He was the son of the late Cornelius Ayer Wood and Muriel Prindle Wood, and was also the grandson of the late Ellen Ayer Wood of Andover, and William Prindle and Mina Merrill Prindle of Duluth, Minn.

Mr. Wood especially enjoyed music. Family members remember him once saying, "that for inspiration, solace, and refreshing, I turn to the creative and performing arts – above all to Bach and Mozart, of whom it is said, 'When the angels play for God, they play Bach; and when they play for themselves, it is Mozart.'"

Members of his family include his wife, the former Rosalyn Kempton; a daughter, Victoria Wood Nagle of New York City; a son, Dr. Wheaton Bissell Wood of Athens, Ohio; a stepdaughter, Claire Coward Wilkes of Easton, Conn.; five grandsons; and a sister, Muriel Wood Ponzecchi, of Pasadena, Calif.

A service will be held Tuesday, June 14, at 11 a.m. in the Wood Chapel at West Parish Cemetery, Andover. Burial will be in the Wood family plot across from the chapel.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Boston Symphony Orchestra Youth Program, the New England Conservatory of Music, the Boston Early Music Festival, the Bach Choir of Bethlehem, Pa., or to the charity of one's choice.

A million-dollar school department budget in the not-so-distant future was predicted this week by William Doherty, School Committee secretary. He based his conclusion on an average year-to-year increase of $50,000 over the past year's budget plus extra expenses that will be incurred for the new high school, additions to the grammar schools and increasing enrollment in all grades. Doherty's opinions on the future of the school system were solicited during a discussion of the growth of the department during the past 25 years.

The delay and confusion over production of Salk polio vaccine is tragic. Because, for some youngster, it may mean the precise difference between living a normal, happy life and one burdened with the crippling aftereffects of polio. To that boy or girl, the present sorry mess will be more than an annoyance. It will be a personal tragedy. It is one we should not allow. It seems obvious that the politicians have interfered with the doctors and scientists. There have been so many demands made by so many politically-minded individuals that confusion was bound to arise. When the medical men tried to set up testing procedures to determine the absolute safety of the serum, elected officials began name-calling in attempts to place the blame for delay. Their cries caused even further doubt in the minds of the people, so that even more exhaustive tests were required. Thus the program was again delayed.

From budding young salesmen to retirees

Andover Days is family-friendly; lots to do for people of all ages

By Judy Wakefield

DO YOU LIKE antique cars? There's a cruise just for you.

Feel like watching your kids smile on a trolley ride? Got that, too.

Prefer to kick off your summer on a lawn chair in the Park listening to live music provided by a big band? You can.

And it's all for free.

Andover Days weekend is here and this year's event promises to appeal to residents of all ages. Several local groups have banded together for the past several months to come up with a showcase of the town that promises to welcome summer in Andover in a super grand way. Organizers are confident that by offering a myriad of entertainment on a late spring weekend – including a variety of offerings pulled together by the Andover Cultural Committee – people will come and simply enjoy the strong sense of community that Andover has to offer.

"Organizations are reaching out and we are doing this so people can see there is a strong sense of community here," said Elaine Clements, who heads the Andover Historical Society. "That's what this is all about."

Her group is hosting an antique car cruise on Saturday. That ties in with the group's fund-raising raffle. A 1973 convertible Mustang is being raffled by the Historical Society as a way to raise money. Tickets cost $100 and 250 will be sold. Already, 150 have been sold and tickets will be available at the Historical Society's table at the event.

The winner will be announced at 3 p.m. and is certain to join the antique-car cruise that will make its way down Main Street from 3:15 to 4 p.m. Also taking part will be Bob Marcus of Andover, who won last year's antique car raffle.

"It's just a fun thing," said Marcus, who

Artist brings memories of Ireland to life

O'Callaghan's paintings on display at Lorica Artworks

STEP INTO THE STUDIOS of his Somerville duplex, and visitors will see canvas upon canvas of Arthur O'Callaghan's paintings. Some half finished, some slightly modified from his original thought, and some completely done, but not to his satisfaction.

"Some of them I get done in several hours. Others take weeks. The subject may be very complex, and the process of capturing an idea and getting the paint and canvas to cooperate can take a while."

The paintings that O'Callaghan does let out of his house are making an impact. His works are mainly pictures of his homeland, Ireland, where he was born and raised, or of Martha's Vineyard, where he first immigrated to 10 years ago.

"I especially like the Irish ones that remind me of living in Ireland, and how they capture the feel of places and people I remember."

Currently on display at Lorica Artworks, at 90 Main St., O'Callaghan's paintings seem to remind others of Ireland as well. He has sold works to couples who have traveled to the Emerald Isle and are struck by the images and the memories his paintings provoke.

O'Callaghan also has some younger fans who are attracted to his style and colors, although may have never been to Ireland.

Mia Guerrera, owner of Lorica, says she is mainly impressed with O'Callaghan's ability to easily flow from landscape to seascape to still-life. "There is a freedom in his work that you don't see with other artists. Arthur is very courageous with colors, and people of all ages and walks of life gravitate to his paintings."

Such success and admiration for his works is new to O'Callaghan. Growing up in Cork, Ireland, O'Callaghan is the middle of 11 children with 5 siblings older and 5 younger.

He remembers his schoolbooks all being covered with drawings. But it was not until four years ago that the drawing turned to painting.

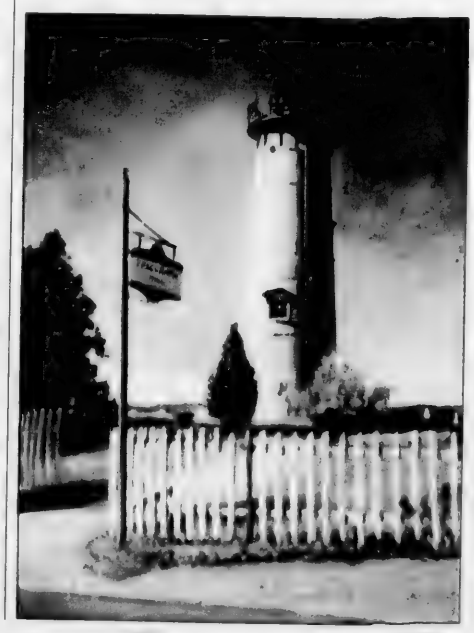

"I knew in order to really devote myself to art, I needed to reach a stable point in my life. Once I got there, I felt I could devote the time to start the long process of learning to paint."

Through courses at the Boston Center for Adult Education, O'Callaghan was able to experiment more with paints. Then he began working with Craig Srebnik, a teacher O'Callaghan genuinely admires. He can now put galleries like Lorica on his resume.

"I display all Irish artists, so Arthur's work is in fine company, many of whom also show paintings in Ireland. He has a realistic style that also seems to be part impressionist and part romantic. His drive and enthusiasm are what's helping him break out," comments Guerrera.

His works are also on display at Out of the Blue in Cambridge, and this summer can be seen at the Irish Connections Festival in Canton. O'Callaghan also has works on Martha's Vineyard – including

Exciting comedy at Collins Center

4th Annual Comedy Extravaganza takes place Friday night

By Greta Cuyler

A husband and wife yo-yo act, a reality TV star and an actor from The Sopranos walk into the Collins Center...

But seriously, folks!

Those are just some of the comedic acts who will perform at this year's 4th Annual Comedy Extravaganza tomorrow, Friday, June 10 at 8 p.m. at Andover High School's Collins Center for the Performing Arts.

A husband and wife yo-yo act will open this year's show, which is sponsored by Dunkin' Donuts and the Marino Organization.

Combining classic yo-yo tricks with their own creative stylings and incorporating hula hoops and unicycles into their performance is all part of the act for John Higby and Rebecca Loomis Higby. Featured on The Late Show with David Letterman, the couple has performed across the US and Canada, and worldwide.

"It'll be exciting and different," said event organizer Joe Spanos, a teacher at AHS.

For reality TV fans, comedian Dave Russo's face should be familiar. He recently starred as a contestant on The Entertainer, hosted by Wayne Newton. The show chose one contestant to crown as the ultimate entertainer.

Producers of the TV show spotted Russo while he was hosting another performance and asked him to audition for the show. He auditioned, passed and flew to Los Angeles the next day. Russo's comedy act won him first runner up in the competition, and he has since signed with Newton's management company and is living in Las Vegas.

Comic Frank Santorelli, who plays Georgie on The Sopranos, is also a featured comic in this year's show. "I'm the one who always gets beat up at the Bada Bing," he said.

Proceeds of this year's event will be split between the Andover High School television program and Boston area comedian Kevin Knox. Knox, who has performed in the Comedy Extravaganza for the past three years, is currently battling cancer.

There are five comics performing at this year's event. In addition to Russo and Santorelli, they include Paul D'Angelo, a 2005 national finalist in the "The Next Comic" competition; Patti Ross, nominated for "Best Guest Star" American Comedy Award on Roseanne; and Jay Rodrigues, currently headlining at Nick's Comedy Stop.

Comics in the show are familiar with Knox's comedy. "When Kevin's performing, he performs last, because no other comic wants to follow his act," says Russo, who has known Knox for many years.

Among other accomplishments, Knox has appeared on the TV show Rescue Me, starring Dennis Leary.

According to Russo, who used to perform at Giggles in Saugus, Knox was the MC who "knew who the up-and-coming comics were, and reported back to the powers that be."

Knox's recommendations helped Russo book more and more comedy engagements.

"Kevin is super high energy, we're all pulling for him," says Russo, adding that he's heard that Knox is "doing fantastic."

"He's a funny guy who I hope can continue with the battle," said Spanos.

Comic Paul D'Angelo has worked with Knox for years. "We started out in comedy almost at the same time," says D'Angelo, who has been in the business for 18 years.

"I've done several benefits with Kevin. There are a lot of special events we got to work on together. He's a wonderful guy, a good friend," D'Angelo said.

There will be raffle prizes at the show, including a one-year gym membership and cash prizes of $50 and $100.

Tickets may be purchased at the door or in advance.

What's Up? Summer!

With AYS: Lazy Days of Summer No More

By Kevin Hess
ANDOVER YOUTH SERVICES

SO SCHOOL'S JUST ABOUT done and summer's just around the corner. The only question now: What to do next?

Many will attend camps in New Hampshire, Maine and Vermont. Many others will go on vacations with their families to Cape Cod, Martha's Vineyard and other exciting places all over the country.

Some may go to the beach, Water Country or Six Flags for fun and excitement. These are all fabulous ideas on how to spend your summer, but what if you could do them all?

Andover Youth Services is back again for another summer of non-stop pandemonium and adventure. This unique summer program combines all of the best parts of summer. All of the ideas mentioned before can be found in one form or another in this year's AYS Summer Program.

AYS summer trips take us all over New England. From the tops of the White Mountains to the beaches of Martha's Vineyard, from the whitewater rapids of the Kennebec River to the bleachers at historic Fenway Park. The Paintballs will fly, the surf will be surfed, fish will be caught, coasters will be ridden, putts will be made, the Big Apple will be taken by storm, and that's just the tip of the iceberg.

Summer is a time to get out and enjoy the weather, enjoy the world around us, and meet people who want the same thing as us. So come one, come all and join us as we live it up and forget that school even exists.

Our programs are open to all Andover residents who have finished sixth through ninth grades. [Unfortunately, those entering sixth grade are not eligible.] There are plenty of trips, catering to all different appetites for fun. Program booklets and registration sheets can be picked up at the AYS and DCS offices in Town Offices, as well as the main offices of all three middle schools and St. Augustine's and Pike School. We are accepting mail-in registration until June 11th.

After the 11th, we will be holding open walk-in registration at the Youth Services office.

Summertime is about kicking back and relaxing, but it's also about getting out of the house to see the world and meet more of the people we share it with.

Other AYS News

The Andover Days 5k Road Race/Walk is tomorrow, Friday. Don't forget to register for this race/walk/community event to raise money for the Youth Center project. Join us in the first annual event that will combine competitive running with bands and lemonade stands, Frisbees and other fantastical forms of entertainment for all ages. Registration forms can be picked up at any of the stores downtown that are members of the Andover Business Center Association, as well as at the AYS and DCS offices at Town Offices, 36 Bartlet St.

For more information, check out the Web site: www.andoverdays5k.com.

Directly after the race, Andover bands Apollo Sunshine and Grimis will be hitting the stage at the Old Town Hall for a concert that is sure to amaze so the fun won't be stopping just because the race has. Also be on the lookout for information about the annual Keep It Wild fashion show, which is coming up on Thursday, June 23 at the Old Town Hall. And for those of you who missed out on last year's rock opera, Zantalamos, never fear, for it's coming back on June 19th.

For other interesting and fun events and programs by the Andover Youth Services, always check out our Web site: www.andoveryouthservices.com.

WHAT'S UP is written by kids for kids. The feature also highlights activities available for younger Andover residents. E-mail submissions to: jack@andovertownsman.com.

It's summer...and, I'm still learning!

We hear this all the time. To our students, summer's offer an opportunity to improve and get a headstart on the next school year. Most work to strengthen basic skills, while others attend Huntington in order to "get ahead." In some cases, parents merely want their child to avoid getting rusty over the long vacation.

How can we meet the needs of so many different students? First, we design programs to address the specific needs of each child. Then, our certified teachers provide personal attention and individualized instruction, sprinkled with encouragement and praise. And, it really, our students improve their skills...and their self-confidence, soars.

Give us a call... we can put a smile on your child's face... and get him or her ready for the next school year!

ANDOVER DAYS

won a 1972 MG-B roadster last year in the raffle. "I have been amazed by the number of people who notice the car and then start talking about cars. I have been swapping car stories ever since I got it."

The car hook at Andover Days clearly appeals to this retiree, while a trio of young budding salesmen got hooked by another fund-raising opportunity.

A pair of entrepreneurial brothers and their friend have jumped on the wristband craze as a way to raise money for that proposed youth center that is planned for West Andover.

"When you're growing up, you need a place (like a youth center) to hang out," said Tim Oteri, 11 and a fifth-grader at West Elementary School.

He's teamed with his brother, John Oteri, 8, and their friend, Max Novick, 9, and they are selling "I Support AYS" tie-dyed blue, yellow and green wristbands for $5. It works out to a $4 profit per wristband and proceeds are going directly to the Andover Youth Services' account for the proposed youth center.

"Not everyone wants to hang out downtown after school," said Tim, referring to a habit most enjoyed by local middle-schoolers. "But we have no place to go to play basketball and other sports. The youth center would have all that."

So he ordered 1,000 wristbands and is hoping to eventually sell every one of them. That's a $4,000 donation to the youth center project.

This trio of young salesmen set up a table at the recent West Elementary School auction night and sold 125 bands. They'll be pitching again tomorrow night as they plan to set up a table during the Fun Run event being held in conjunction with the Andover Days celebration.

For Max Novick, this project is all about doing something.

"I was watching the AYS telethon (last February) and I just started thinking how I should help, too. I want a youth center like all those other kids who were in the telethon," Max said.

He went to school talking about jumping on the wristband craze while classmate John Oteri said he and his brother wanted to raise money for the youth center, too. John and Max are in the same third-grade class at West Elementary.

They agreed Andover Days was the way to go.

Tour five local gardens in bloom

New this year: Daisies & Dogwood Summer Tour of Gardens

THE ANDOVER HISTORICAL SOCIETY'S 2005 Daisies & Dogwood Summer Tour of Gardens is a new event on the eastern Massachusetts garden tour circuit.

In addition to touring five distinctive, private Andover gardens, Daisies & Dogwoods participants can also enjoy three lectures and demonstrations at Marland Place on Stevens Street in Andover. Sponsored by Dana Landscaping, Daisies & Dogwoods will take place Saturday, June 18, from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m., rain or shine. Tour and program tickets are $20 in advance; or $25 after June 11.

Boxed lunches can be ordered for $10 in advance; or $12 the day of the tour.

Tickets may be purchased at the Andover Historical Society, 97 Main St.; at the Andover Bookstore in Olde Andover Village; and online at www.mvarts.info. Tickets are redeemed for a tour map and guide after 9:30 a.m. the day of the tour at Marland Place, Stevens Street, or Andover Historical Society.

Tickets ordered online before June 11 will be mailed.

Tickets ordered online after June 11 can be picked up the day of the event, along with the tour map and guide, at Marland Place only. Parking is limited.

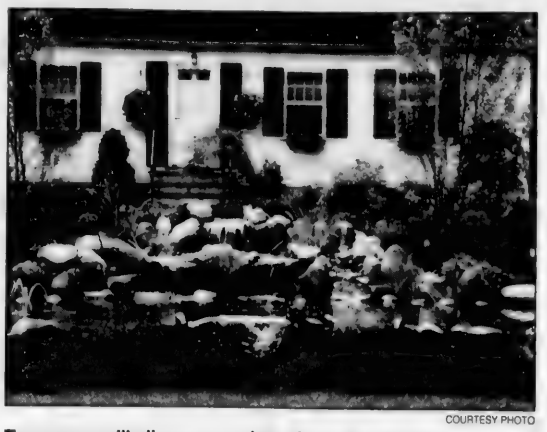

Additional parking will be available at the Municipal Office parking lot on Bartlet Street, with free shuttle service to Marland Place.

1 p.m. – Paul Parent of The Paul Parent Garden Club Sunday morning radio show on "Everything you've always wanted to know about gardening but were afraid to ask;" and

3 p.m. – Flowers by Steve, Andover and Bradford, on "Ordinary flowers in extraordinary designs."

Tour-goers will glimpse a variety of local garden landscapes.

On the role and importance of gardens, Parent writes on his Web site (www.PaulParent.com): "Landscaping does more than increase the value of your property; it can provide privacy, beauty, comfort, recreation, security, and can cut down on maintenance costs."

Sponsored by Dana Landscaping, the 2005 Daisies & Dogwoods garden tour also marks the first major collaboration between the Andover Historical Society and Marland Place, an independent and assisted living facility located in the historic Marland Mills.

Marland Place features a warm, open atmosphere with exposed brick walls and an airy "Main Street" space where the Daisies & Dogwoods Café will be located for the event.

Even with the slow return of warm weather this year, organizers said, the five gardens on the tour should be in full bloom by mid-June, waiting to delight tour participants.

On the tour, visitors will see water gardens, new gardens, and mature gardens.

"This year's Daisies & Dogwoods Garden Tour promises a treasury of delights," says Joyce Bakshi, committee chairwoman. "Words like 'surprise' and 'unexpected' bring a magical charm to this year's tour. One garden is filled with childhood whimsy. Another is a casual backyard 'living room.' Still another is a hidden paradise in the woods. One garden, just a mile from downtown Andover, opens up to a scenic vista that makes you feel as if you're away in the country."

"Highly creative and personal collections give insights into the energetic drive behind the development and evolution of each very special garden," organizers said. "Throughout, participants will savor inspiring combinations of architecture and unique plant materials during what promises to be a purely delightful day of gardening indulgence."

From left, TyLynn Graham of No. Attleboro (No. 221), Meaghan Keefe of Andover (No. 16), and Lauren Barber of New Bedford (No. 203) clear the last hurdle at the same time in the 100-meter hurdles at the MIAA All-State Track and Field Championships Saturday, June 4 at Worcester State College. Keefe took third place in the event.

First-ever All-State outdoor championship for AHS girls team

They are fearless!

AHS girls track & field finishes first in Massachusetts

By Rick Harrison

The bigger the meet... the more intense the pressure... the better they perform.

A talented nucleus of Andover High girls track and field athletes – not content with being State Division 1 champions – showed everyone else in Massachusetts what they're made of on the way to capturing the team title at the 2005 All-State Championship Meet hosted by Worcester State College.

With a pair of relay victories – and top four individual finishes by Brittany Moriarty, Meghan Keefe and Felicia Thompson – the Lady Warriors chalked up 37 points to best runner-up Newton North (32) by five in a huge field of 74 schools that competed in the searing heat at WSC's John Coughlin Stadium.

The historic, first-ever All-State outdoor championship for the AHS girls now stands alongside the two boys titles earned in 1970 and 1984.

Track and field also joins swim and dive, basketball and gymnastics as AHS girls teams that have captured one or more Massachusetts state titles within the last six years (since 1999).

Exhibiting no stage fright at the Bay State's biggest annual showcase, the 4x100 sprint relay of Keefe, Jenny Dlesk, Brittany Pierce and Caroline Pierce highlighted the memorable day by breaking a 17-year-old meet record.

The quartet finished in 48.68 seconds to eclipse the existing mark of 48.94 set back in 1988 by a team from Boston Technical High.

The impressive AHS foursome had to be that swift to avenge a split-second loss to Cambridge Rindge & Latin at the Division 1 Meet.

The Falcons, who edged Andover 49.30 to 49.35 a week earlier at Lovely Field, ran a 48.70 in Worcester to lose by 2/100ths of a second.

The other victorious relay quartet consisted of 4x800 runners Emily Korba, Michelle Pirro, Courtney Hamer and Moriarty.

Hamer has also been a member of three state-title swim teams, while Moriarty played for the championship hoop squad that appeared in consecutive state finals.

TRACK & FIELD

This Saturday Andover High's top All-State finishers will travel to Thornton Academy in Saco, Maine for the season-ending New England Championship Meet.

That group includes Meghan Keefe, Brittany Moriarty, Felicia Thompson, Emily Korba, Brittany Pierce, Caroline Pierce, Jenny Dlesk, Michelle Pirro, Courtney Hamer, Chris Cole, Vasili Kostakis, Pierre Hage and Robert Kaufman.

Andover was unable to compete in the annual Massachusetts Track Coaches Association State Girls Heptathlon and State Boys Pentathlon held earlier this week at Lowell's Cawley Stadium and Burlington High respectively – because the first day of the two-day competition conflicted with AHS graduation.

ALL-STATE CHAMPIONSHIP MEET
Andover girls

The 4x800 meter relay of University of Miami-bound Korba, Pirro, Hamer and Moriarty competed a sweep of Division 1 and All-State titles, lowering their own school record (set a week earlier) of 9:41.26 by more than six seconds with a 9:35.04 clocking as they won the race.

Hamer, a junior, is the lone underclassman on that relay.

Runner-up Bromfield High of Harvard was more than two seconds behind in 9:37.44.

After posting the fastest time in the 100-meter high hurdles prelims (15.04), Division 1 champ Meghan Keefe settled for third place with a 15.10 clocking that trailed winner Lauren Barber of New Bedford. Barber finished second to Keefe a week earlier.

Keefe added another point in the long jump with a top leap of 16'7 3/4" for eighth place.

Moriarty, the Division 1 champ in the 800 meters, broke her own school record in the half mile for the fourth time, lowering it by 14/100ths of a second to 2:17.00 on the way to a fourth place finish.

Felicia Thompson, whose career personal-best discus toss is more than five feet farther than the winning throw at the All-States, settled for fourth on this day with a 116'6" heave.

Thompson was virtually unbeatable in this event throughout her high school career.

The Lady Warriors had two other strong performances at Worcester.

Brittany Pierce was 10th in the 100 hurdles (15.86), while Division 1 pole vault heroine Libby Fortier finished in a tie for 15th after clearing 8'6."

Korba, who had qualified for the 800 meters with a third-place finish at the Division 1 Meet, opted out of that race to concentrate on the 4x800 relay.

Andover boys

The Golden Warriors chalked up seven points to tie for 33rd place as 73 teams scored on the boys side.

The 4x400 relay of Chris Cole, Vasili Kostakis, Pierre Hage and Robert Kaufman raced to fifth place in 3:26.93, almost four seconds lower than their third-place clocking at the Division 1 Meet.

Cole contributed the other three points by placing sixth in the discus throw (148'7").

Division 1 champ Gabe Greeley tied for 12th among 21 qualifiers in the pole vault after clearing the bar at 11'6."

Andover High's Brittany Moriarty (No. 18, at right) edges out Lily Calderwood (No. 47) of Bromfield at the finish line of the 800-meter run for a 4th place finish in 2:17.00 at the MIAA All-State Track and Field Championships on Saturday at Worcester State College.

AHS ROUNDUP

The Magnificent Seven

By Rick Harrison

In addition to the victorious AHS girls track and field team, there was also a flurry of activity for seven Andover High teams that qualified for the single-elimination MIAA Tournament.

• Buddy Farnham scored with six seconds left in regulation to lift the AHS boys lacrosse squad past Beverly, 11-10, as the locals scored three times in the final four minutes to pull out the exciting win...

• Baseball, girls lacrosse, girls tennis and boys tennis also chalked up tourney victories – while boys volleyball and softball suffered season-ending losses to Lawrence and Methuen respectively...

• Both lacrosse and tennis teams were facing stern tourney tests (details below) as the Townsman went to press.

• Boys lacrosse faced top seed and traditional powerhouse Duxbury, girls lacrosse played the only team to beat the Lady Warriors this spring (Framingham) and both tennis squads were up against Concord-Carlisle teams owning a combined record of 35-1.

BASEBALL

The Andover High varsity baseball team, seeded No. 1 in a 22-team qualifying field, shook the cobwebs and nerves after a rocky first inning and went on to topple visiting Boston Latin, 8-4, in an MIAA Division 1 North Tournament first-round game at Aumais Park.

Tuesday afternoon the locals followed up with an 11-2 quarterfinal round romp over Newton North at Aumais Park.

Head coach Ken Maglio's crew, now 16-3 overall, has advanced to the semifinals where it will battle No. 5 seed Reading (16-6) tonight (Thursday) at neutral Stoklosa/Alumni Field in Lowell (7 p.m.).

Tonight's survivor moves to the North championship game on Saturday night at LeLacheur Park in Lowell (6 p.m.), facing the winner of yesterday's other semifinal between No. 7 St. John's Prep of Danvers (14-8) and familiar MVC foe Haverhill.

The surprising 6th-seeded Hillies (13-7), who limped to the end of the regular season, beat Peabody (6-3) and Arlington (7-4) in its first two tourney games.

Andover and Haverhill met once during the regular season with the Hillies squeezing out a 4-3 victory.

Merrimack Valley Conference Division 1 titlist Andover is just three runs from being undefeated with the only losses to Lowell (7-6), Haverhill (4-3) and Central Catholic (3-2).

Stat leaders

Through the first 18 games (not including Newton North), Andover had a hefty .359 team batting average and an impressive 2.11 earned run average.

Doubles leaders were Iorio with five, Malaguti four, Hogan, Matt Hennessy and Andrew Hennessy three apiece.

Godefroi and Carroll have slammed four triples each while Furness, Hogan, Iorio, Malaguti and Matt Hennessy have two apiece.

Hogan and Godefroi (versus Newton North) own the club's lone homers.

The team had also stolen 24 bases, paced by Malaguti with seven and Iorio five.

Iorio was tops in total bases (36) and slugging percentage (.493), while Malaguti was close behind with 35 and .486 and Hogan stood at 33 and .471.

Malaguti had a spectacular .667 on-base percentage, while Hogan was at .586, Iorio .548, Godefroi .487, Matt Hennessy .486 and Andrew Hennessy .485.

On the mound, Godefroi is 6-0 with a 1.97 ERA. In 42 2/3 innings he has allowed only 27 hits and 12 earned runs while striking out 57 and walking just 18.

Craig Lanciani is 5-0 with a 2.80 ERA. In 25 innings he has yielded 20 hits and fanned 20.

DIVISION 1 NORTH TOURNAMENT
First Round
Andover 8
Boston Latin 4

Sophomore lefthander Dan Godefroi settled down after a shaky first inning, pitching no-hit ball over the next six frames as the Golden Warriors clawed back and won their tourney opener at Aumais Park.

After Latin lashed five hits and scored three runs in the top of the first, AHS bounced right back with two in the first, two in the second and solo runs in the third, fourth, seventh and eighth (Division 1 tourney games are nine innings).

The locals scored twice in the opening stanza on leadoff walks to Matt Iorio and Paul Malaguti, a single by Matt Hogan and RBI double by Matt Hennessy.

Iorio ripped a one-out double to left field in the second. Malaguti reached on an infield error and Hogan smacked another RBI single to left.

Singles by Joe Gil, Matt Furness (infield) and Iorio (RBI) chased home a run in the third to make it 5-3.

Malaguti launched a leadoff double to center in the fourth. Hogan beat out an infield hit, both advanced on a passed ball and Matt Hennessy laid down a squeeze bunt.

In the seventh, Matt Hennessy slugged a triple to center and tagged on Greg Carroll's one-out sac-fly for a 7-3 lead.

The Wolfpack nicked reliever Myke Fortier for a run in the eighth, parlaying a walk, passed ball and two-out double.

Andover added its final tally, unearned, in the bottom of the eighth when Fortier reached on a two-base throwing error, took third on a passed ball and scored on a Malaguti bunt.

The Golden Warriors lashed 12 hits, which included a 3-for-4 performance with three RBI by Hogan.

Iorio, Malaguti, Matt Hennessy and Gil contributed two safeties each and Furness had one.

Malaguti also scored three runs and Iorio two.

Godefroi (6-0) yielded five hits over his seven-inning stint, striking out nine (six swinging) and walking two.

Fortier, picking up his team-high third save, surrendered one hit and one run while fanning one and walking one over his two frames.

"Matt Iorio put on a clinic at second base," said Maglio. "He played a great defensive game."

The veteran handled nine chances flawlessly with three putouts, six assists and he also turned a 5-4-3 double play.

No. 16 seed Boston Latin finished the season 12-10.

Quarterfinal Round
Andover 11
Newton North 2

North (13-9) came into this game riding a seven-game win streak – but the Lions had no answer for Andover's high-powered attack and the strong pitching of starter and winner Myke Fortier.

Dan Godefroi belted a two-run homer to highlight a four-run second inning that got the locals off and running to the victory.

AHS, scoring double figures for the fifth time this spring, also had a long RBI triple by catcher Joe Gil and was helped by several Newton errors.

Fortier improved to 5-1 on the mound with another solid effort, scattering three hits over the first six innings on the way to victory.

BOYS TENNIS

Coach Mike Wartman's Andover High boys tennis team advanced to the MIAA Division 1 North Tournament semifinals with a pair of back-to-back 5-0 victories over first-time opponents Lynn English and Cambridge Rindge & Latin.

The two home-court wins pushed the Golden Warriors into the semifinals, where they were scheduled to meet undefeated and top seeded Dual County League champ Concord-Carlisle (18-0).

The semifinal match was played yesterday (Wednesday) after Townsman presstime.

The Merrimack Valley Conference titlists, 15-2 overall, entered the semifinal riding a 13-match win streak.

Andover's top doubles team of senior Capt. Mike Zakin and junior Eric Krupnik rolled to a 6-0, 6-1 triumph over Kim Ngem and Matt Bollen.

The junior tandem of Seth Davidovits and Julian Vastl trampled LE's Corey Bogart and Konstantin Cheyuilski 6-0, 6-3.

This was the first time these two schools met on the tennis court.

No. 13 seed Lynn English finished the season 8-6 overall.

QUARTERFINAL ROUND

Andover 5
Cambridge R&L 0

The final score was deceptive because CR&L took three of the five matches to the three-set limit.

In each case Andover won the first and third sets, rallying after the Falcons had tied by capturing the second set.

"I was impressed with our kids' resolve in the third sets," said Wartman. "It was a hot, humid day which made it even tougher to stay out there a long time."

Second singles Jeremy Hogan was the last one off the court after grinding out a two-hour 6-3, 3-6, 6-4 triumph over the Falcons' Lyle Moran.

"Jeremy's match, in particular, had a lot of long points," said Wartman. "He played very well, for the most part, keeping his composure and battling back after dropping the second set. He stayed mentally tough."

First singles Dave Adams also suffered a mid-match lapse, but totally dominated otherwise in a 6-1, 4-6, 6-0 decision over James Jeffreys.

"Dave lost his focus after a strong start – and then did a nice job of regaining it and playing very aggressive tennis in the third set," said Wartman.

The match with the most momentum swings was second doubles, where Seth Davidovits and Julian Vastl registered a 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 victory over stubborn CR&L duo Jason Modica and Matt Kelsey.

The Golden Warriors' tandem trailed 4-3 in the third set before winning the last three games to close out the match.

Josh Caplan played the quickest match of the day, having ample time to cheer on his teammates after rolling 6-3, 6-0 against Ben Cohen.

Also sweeping was first doubles Mike Zakin and Eric Krupnik, who toppled Niko Bowie and Chris Hansman in symmetrical 6-3, 6-3 style.

No. 5 seed Cambridge Rindge and Latin, which finished runner-up in its league and 13-3 overall, defeated Beverly 4-1 in its first round match.

GIRLS TENNIS

The Andover High girls tennis juggernaut made its way through to the semifinal round of the MIAA Division 1 North Tournament, thanks to a pair of convincing victories over Gloucester, 5-0, and Winchester, 4-1, at the AHS courts.

That set up the match the Lady Warriors have been waiting a year for – a semifinal round showdown against defending State Division 1 champ Concord-Carlisle which ousted the locals from the 2004 tourney with a hotly-contested 3-2 victory in the semifinals.

Most of the same players from both teams are back again, with one large exception, as AHS No. 1 singles Marsha Mogilevich has moved on to Duke University.

"We definitely got the match we wanted," said Andover second-year coach David Hughes.

Hughes and his team were hoping for some payback when the two powers collided yesterday (Wednesday), after Townsman presstime, at the AHS courts.

The Lady Warriors were the top seed in an original field of 22 teams while C-C, which split a pair of matches with Newton South to finish as Dual County League co-champ, entered as the No. 4 seed with a 17-1 overall record including tourney romps over Acton-Boxboro (4-1) and Reading (5-0).

The Patriots boast three of the state's top singles players in reigning state champ Shivani Dave, Kelsey Stone and Lacey Herchek, along with North Sectional doubles champions Tasha Stone and Amanda Arthur.

Concord-Carlisle was playing its third match in four days, and Dave has been known to cramp up when faced with heat and/or consecutive matches.

AHS, winners of a milestone 250 straight conference matches and 324 of their last 325 in MVC play, stepped on the court against Concord with a perfect 17-0 overall record.

The winner of yesterday's match meets Boston Latin in the North final scheduled for this afternoon (Thursday) at 3:30 p.m.

At presstime, the site of the championship match was unknown.

No. 10 seed Latin (18-5) gave AHS its toughest match during the regular season before the locals squeezed out a 3-2 win that came down to a third-set tiebreaker at first doubles.

The Wolfpack reached the final with wins over Beverly (5-0), Lincoln-Sudbury (4-1) and Newton South in the semifinals (3-2).

All-Conference

Junior Hannah Zarkar has been selected a Merrimack Valley Conference Division 1 co-Player of the Year, while six of her Lady Warrior teammates fill all but one other position as AHS rightfully dominates the 2005 All-Conference Team.

Sophomore Caroline Koch and senior Capt. Christie Spang are No. 2 and No. 3 singles on the squad.

First doubles went to senior Jodi Richard and sophomore JooHee Yoon, and second doubles to senior Lindsay Davidson and sophomore Rikki Sartor.

David Hughes is the MVC Division 1 Coach of the Year.

Zarkar shares Player of the Year honors with Central Catholic sophomore Amanda Carroll.

Those two split a pair of close regular season matches, handing each other their only conference loss.

DIVISION 1 NORTH TOURNAMENT

FIRST ROUND

Andover 5
Gloucester 0

The MVC champs disposed of Gloucester as a top seed should, sweeping everything in straight sets while dropping only four games in singles and one in doubles.

The biggest news in the uneventful match was the flip-flopping of the two AHS doubles teams, after Lindsay Davidson and Rikki Sartor edged JooHee Yoon and Jodi Richard in a challenge match during practice to earn the No. 1 spot.

Davidson and Sartor responded with a 6-1, 6-0 romp past Heidi Marquis and Rachel Soper of the Fisherwomen.

Yoon and Richard, meanwhile, blitzed Liz Sousa and Caroline Fleming 6-0, 6-0 at second doubles.

Caroline Koch also registered a 6-0, 6-0 whitewash over Gloucester's Vanessa Bertolini.

Hannah Zarkar toppled Carly Muniz 6-0, 6-3 in the battle at first singles, while Christie Spang drilled Lauren Foster 6-1, 6-0.

No. 16 seed Gloucester, which finished the season 9-6, defeated Somerville, 4-1, in a preliminary round match.

QUARTERFINAL ROUND

Winchester 1

The Lady Warriors got the kind of workout they needed to help prepare for Concord-Carlisle, as three of the matches against No. 8 seed Winchester (15-5) went the three-set distance.

In a rematch with a player she came-from-behind to beat in three sets at the North Sectional Individual Tournament, Hannah Zarkar outlasted the Sachems' Taylor Shean 7-5, 5-7, 6-2.

"In Sectionals, Hannah got off to a slow start. She lost the first set to Shean (0-6) and struggled all the way through," said coach Hughes.

AHS ROUNDUP

■ GIRLS TENNIS

"Today she was determined to come out faster and stronger. By winning the first set Hannah established the tone. It was the difference in the match."

The rivals split a pair of three-set doubles, Jodi Richard and JooHee Yoon trimming Emily Potter and Jenna Kelly 6-1, 3-6, 6-3 while Lindsay Davidson and Rikki Sartor were beaten by Winchester's Katey Lynch and Jenna Weiner 6-2, 3-6, 6-3.

"We knew going in that doubles were Winchester's strength," said Hughes. "Like us they have excellent depth there.

"We don't get to play a lot of three-setters so these, even though we lost one, were good practice and should help us down the line against the better teams."

The only easy wins for AHS in this match came at second and third singles, where Caroline Koch popped Jackie Lionetta 6-2, 6-0 and Christie Spang dominated Natalie Lin 6-1, 6-1.

Koch also destroyed Lionetta 6-0, 6-0 in the second round of the North Sectionals.

GIRLS LACROSSE

Hat tricks by top scorers Maggie Lamond and Rachel Fox sparked the Andover High girls varsity lacrosse team to a 10-5 victory over Acton-Boxboro in an MIAA Division 1 North quarterfinal round game at Lovely Field.

That triumph advanced the Merrimack Valley Conference champion Lady Warriors, 18-1 overall and seeded No. 2 in a 12-team field, to the semifinals where they have a chance to avenge their only loss of the season.

AHS was scheduled to host No. 3 seed Framingham yesterday (Wednesday), after Townsman presstime, at Lovely Field.

The Flyers topped Andover, 16-7, in the fourth game of the season on April 15.

Since then the locals have clicked off 15 straight wins.

Framingham enters at 19-1-1 including a 17-4 romp over Beverly in the quarterfinals.

"Framingham is very skilled, athletic and well-coached," said AHS head coach John McVeigh. "That's an impressive combination. It will be tough but hopefully we'll be ready and we'll have some fun against them."

Andover has scored double figures 16 times in 19 games, including six straight, and for the season the champs hold a huge 245-121 goal edge over the opposition.

Scoring leaders

The Lady Warriors' unstoppable offense is led by Maggie Lamond, who had 43 goals and 34 assists for 77 points through the first 19 games.

Rachel Fox netted her Merrimack Valley Conference leading 50th goal of the season in the North Andover game, and through 19 games she had 53 goals and 14 assists for 67 points.

Kate Nichols is also having a banner spring with 35 goals and 27 assists for 62 points.

Fox in Pennsylvania

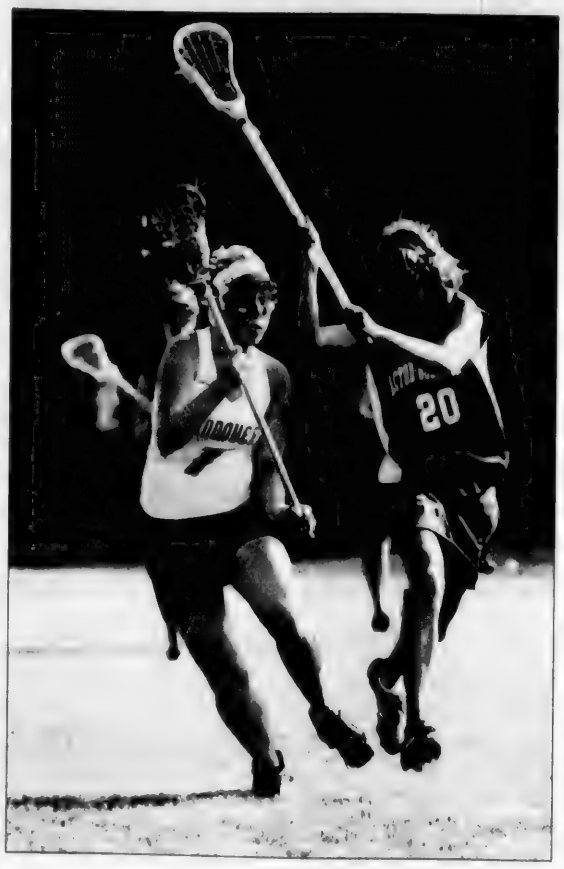

Over the Memorial Day weekend, Rachel Fox traveled to Bethlehem, Pa. where she played in the 2005 National Women's Lacrosse Tournament with the Lower New England team.

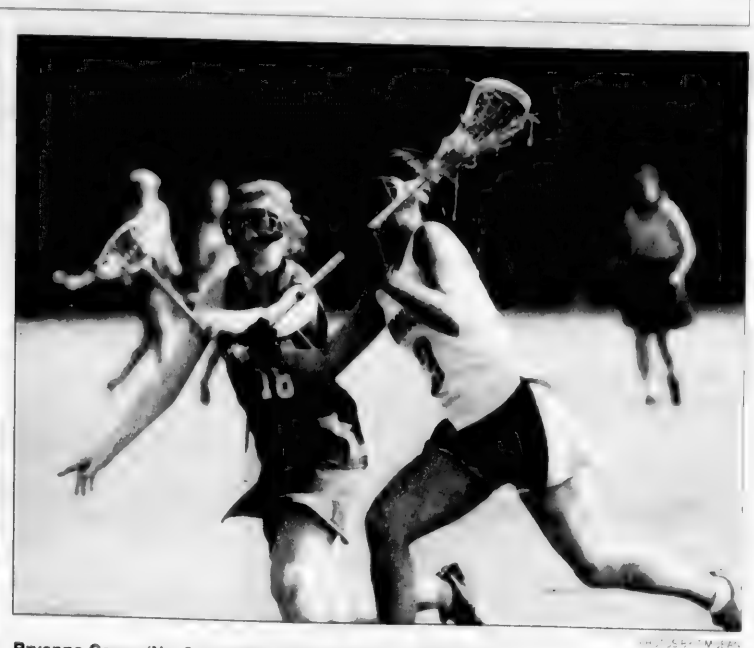

Fox was nominated to try out for the regional squad, which was selected after those sessions held at Loomis-Chaffee Prep School in South Windsor, Ct.

The tourney showcased the best girls lacrosse players in the country, and Fox's team was composed of players from Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

Splitting time between midfield and attack, Fox helped Lower New England to a bronze medal (third place) in its division.

Fox, whose older brother John is a two-year AHS boys lacrosse captain headed for Bates College in the fall, plans to play in several other national tournaments this summer.

Bryanna Casey (No. 3, at right) runs around an Acton-Boxborough defender. Andover won last Thursday's Division 1 North quarterfinal round game, 10-5, at Lovely Field.

DIVISION 1 NORTH TOURNAMENT
FIRST ROUND
Andover 10
Acton-Boxboro 5

Playing for the first time in 12 days, it took the host and No. 2 seed Lady Warriors half the game to get untracked at Lovely Field.

It was 3-3 at the half, before AHS scored four times in the first seven minutes of the second half including the tie-breaking tally by sophomore midfielder Rachel Fox just 32 seconds into the period.

The Lady Warriors scored six of the first seven goals after the break and held a 7-2 scoring edge in the final session.

"The long layoff affected us at the start," admitted coach McVeigh. "We looked tight in the first half.

"We were a lot calmer with the ball and shared the ball better in the second half. We didn't let the pressure get to us. The girls rose to the challenge as a team.

"Acton-Boxboro deserves credit," said McVeigh. "They played very well early. They come from a strong league (Dual County) and they had a tournament win under their belt."

The Colonials opened MIAA play with a 12-9 victory over No. 10 seed Waltham.

Fox and Capt. Maggie Lamond led the Andover attack with three goals each – and they also sparked the second-half rally with two goals apiece.

Capt. Kate Nichols pocketed two goals, while senior attackers Jacqui Munro and Bryanna Casey had one each.

Lamond completed a six-point day with three assists. Casey also had three assists and solo setups went to Nichols, Munro, junior attack Casey Salois, sophomore attack McKenzie Trainor and sophomore attack Briana Gross.

Elissa Slovin played the entire game in net and finished with eight saves.

Scoring a goal each for No. 7 seed A-B, which finished the season 11-8 overall, were Erin Mannherz, Jill LaForest, Becca Goldman, Laura Hanna and Amy Cremin.

"It's always great to win a tourney game," said McVeigh.

BOYS LACROSSE

The Farnham legacy continues to grow.

Junior midfielder Buddy Farnham scored with just six seconds left in regulation, lifting the Andover High boys varsity lacrosse team to a pulsating come-from-behind 11-10 MIAA Division 1 East Tournament first-round victory over stunned Beverly at Lovely Field.

The win pushed coach Wayne Puglisi's Golden Warriors, seeded No. 8 in a 17-team field, to a quarterfinal round game against top seed Duxbury (19-1) which annihilated Haverhill, 28-2, in its tourney opener.

That contest was played yesterday (Wednesday), after Townsman presstime, in Duxbury.

The Golden Warriors entered with a 13-4 overall record.

Leading scorers

Buddy Farnham was the Golden Warriors' top scorer through 17 games with 34 goals and 17 assists for 51 points, while Mike Lamagna had 30 goals and 11 assists for 41 points.

Farnham's game-winning tally came after AHS goaltender Zach Gostanian made a save, and the locals quickly moved the ball up through midfield and worked it within 10 feet of the Beverly net.

"It was such a typical Farnham goal," said Puglisi. "He jumped up and got the ball, boxed a defender out, dodged two of their kids and ran to within 10 feet of the net before shooting.

"Buddy is so athletic and he lives to perform in the clutch. He has so many big-time goals for us."

Trailing 10-8 with less than five minutes left, AHS came back to tie it 10-10 on goals by senior midfielder Andy Boudreau, assisted by senior middie Eric Hanson, with 3:51 left and Farnham, setup to senior middie Luke Bryden, with 2:13 to play.

The Golden Warriors led 2-1 after one period and 4-3 at the half.

"Things got ugly for a bit in the third quarter," said Puglisi, whose team fell behind 8-6 after being outscored 5-2 at the start of the second half.

Boudreau got the locals back on the right track, scoring late in the third to make it 8-7, but it took the burst in the closing minutes to finally pull it out.

Even after Farnham's go-ahead goal – Gostanian was forced to make one final save after Beverly won the faceoff and the Panthers got a shot off a split-second before the game ended.

"I couldn't believe they were able to get in position so quickly for that last shot," said Puglisi. "But their faceoff guy (All-American Chris Wioncek) was ridiculous. I think he won every draw."

Boudreau added a hat trick to Farnham's five-goal explosion, while solo tallies were netted by junior attackmen Mike Lamagna, A.J. Drivas and senior defender John Minahan.

"It's the first time a defender has scored a goal for us," said Puglisi. "He just ran the ball downfield and took it to the cage."

Bryden and Hanson passed out two assists each and Farnham had one.

Capt. Gostanian made 13 saves and strong defensive support came from senior Capts. John Fox and Jon Yost.

No. 9 seed Beverly finished the season at 12-6.

This was the second time these teams have met in the tourney – and the win provided some sweet revenge for Andover.

"We played them in our first tourney game ever and they thumped us," recalled Puglisi.

Beverly won that first round game 15-6 in the spring of 2000 – when Andover entered with an identical 12-4 record.

JUNIOR OLYMPIAN

COURTESY PHOTO

Andy O'Connell, 16, a sophomore at Andover High School, qualified and competed at the USA Junior Olympic National Gymnastics Competition in Houston, Texas on May 4-8. A total of 12,000 boys from 50 states competed to qualify for the competition, and only 850 boys from 45 states qualified to reach the championship. In his first JO Nationals, O'Connell placed 88th with an all-around score of 46.50. He placed in the top 100 on floor, pommel, p-bars and all-around. He missed the event semi-finals on p-bars by one-hundredth of a point. O'Connell qualified for Nationals by scoring a 46.1 in the regional meet at Springfield College on March 26. He also competed in the Boston Classic on April 16 and placed 5th all-around with a score of 46.3. O'Connell is coached by DeWayne Davenport at Yellow Jackets Gymnastics in Middleton.

BOYS VOLLEYBALL

The Andover High boys varsity volleyball team completed an outstanding 17-6 season with a 3-0 setback to undefeated top seed and host Lawrence in their MIAA Division 1 North Tournament semifinal round match.

"We did far better this year than I ever thought we would," said Golden Warriors' coach George Sullivan. "It was a super group of kids who played their hearts out right to the end.

"We had outstanding leadership from our captains (Pardeep Thandi and Sam Silverman), two of the most dedicated players we've ever had.

"Lawrence is simply a cut above the rest. They have a very good shot at winning it all (state title) this year," said Sullivan.

After defeating Andover, the Lancers (22-0) won the North title with a victory over St. John's Prep of Danvers.

The loss to Lawrence followed a convincing 3-0 sweep of Merrimack Valley Conference rival Haverhill in a best-of-5 quarterfinal round match.

It was only the second setback in the final nine matches for AHS, which suffered half of its six losses this spring to Lawrence.

The champs also posted a pair of 2-0 regular season wins over Andover April 4 and May 4.

Andover will graduate Thandi, Silverman, Chris James, Matt Jacobs, Pat Hughes and Alex Day.

"We have a good nucleus returning but we're definitely going to miss all those guys and (MVC Division 2 MVP) Pardeep's leadership," said Sullivan.

The team held its season-ending party today at Bertucci's in North Andover.

AHS, seeded No. 4, had a shot in the third game before the Lancers finished strong to complete the 30-18, 30-19, 30-24 sweep.

"We had a definite game plan going in and were coming off a series of outstanding practices all week – Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday – leading up to the match," said Sullivan.

"But we went into the first game uptight and out of sight. We served the ball into the net twice and hit a couple of returns out of bounds. Before we knew it we were down 6-1 and we never really recovered until the third game.

"It's frustrating," continued Sullivan. "Lawrence has size and power both in the middle and outside. They're just too big and athletic. They skied over us time and again for blocks.

"And their setter (MVC 1 co-MVP Dennis Lean) is so talented. He may be the best I've ever seen in the conference. He has soft hands and lays the ball exactly where he wants – in perfect position for the kill – every time.

"There may have been a better collection of volleyball players on conference teams in the past," added Sullivan. "But Lawrence has more pure athletes.

"We didn't get a lot of hits (86) for a three-game match," noted Sullivan. "When you don't get the ball much you can't build any momentum.

"Lawrence is like a football team that grinds it out on the ground. They never gave our offense a chance to get untracked."

For the powerhouse Lancers, who received a quarterfinal round bye (seven-team field), this was the first match in almost two weeks.

"They looked a little rusty at times but we had trouble capitalizing on their mistakes," admitted Sullivan.

Andover, meanwhile, had not played in nine days.

Junior middle hitter Jerry Mohan finished with eight kills, but was only 15-for-20 hitting while not handling the ball as much as usual.

Luke Bruno added six hits and 9-for-13 hitting, while Chris James had four kills and 7-for-10.

Other top hitters, most of whom were below their normal percentage, included setter Darren McRoy (5-for-9, two kills), University of Vermont recruit Thandi (4-for-8, two kills), Matt Jacobs (3-for-5, one kill), Pat Hughes (2-for-3, one kill), Tyler Carroll (3-for-4), Nick Assad (3-for-4), Mike Gianopoulos (2-for-2) and Sam Silverman (1-for-1).

Thandi produced the Golden Warriors' only two service aces, finishing 9-for-10, while Gianopoulos and Carroll were both 9-for-9.

McRoy went 8-for-9, Silverman 7-for-7 and Mohan 7-for-8.

As a team, AHS had a rough hitting night with 59-for-86 and 24 kills (68 percent).

The locals were also 49-for-52 serving (94 percent) with two aces.

Alex Day missed the match with an ankle injury, while Pat Hughes was less than 100 percent healthy after twisting an ankle in practice two days before the match.

SOFTBALL

The Andover High softball team capped an outstanding 13-8 season with a frustrating 1-0 loss to Merrimack Valley Conference rival Methuen in the first round of the MIAA Division 1 North Tournament.

Rangers' sophomore pitching ace Hannah Everson fired a no-hitter, and Methuen pushed across an unearned run in the bottom of the sixth to squeeze out the victory.

MVC Division 2 runner-up AHS had won three straight and six of its previous eight.

It was the fourth time in 21 games the Lady Warriors were whitewashed this spring, while Andover held an opponent to two runs or less for the 13th time.

The loss closed out an eighth straight winning season for AHS, during which time the locals are 97-75 with eight tourney appearances.

The future looks bright as coach Stephanie Ragucci's crew graduates only two seniors, pitcher/first baseman Caitlin Carpentier and third baseman Maggie Hanlon.

Both were regular starters and will definitely be missed, Carpentier graduating as one of the winningest pitchers in Andover varsity softball history.

Another dozen players, including seven starters and undefeated pitcher Katie Anderson (5-0), are eligible to return next spring.

DIVISION 1 NORTH TOURNAMENT
FIRST ROUND
Methuen 1
Andover 0

It was not the best possible draw for Andover, shut out for the second time this spring by Everson who also blanked the Lady Warriors 2-0 during the regular season.

AHS, which could have played a different team at home had it not lost a pair of coin flips during the pairings meeting, put the ball in play only six times as 15 of the 21 outs were strikeouts.

MVC Division 2 Player of the Year Caitlin Carpentier, who finished 8-8 on the mound with several tough losses, fired a two-hitter and fanned five.

The lone run scored after a walk, sacrifice bunt and double error on an infield popup.

Had that not happened, the rivals might still be playing today.

ANDOVER SPINE CENTER

Dr. Christopher Condon
Chiropractic Physician

Clinical and scientific evidence support that a normal lateral dimension of the human spine is an essential component to optimal health. While many doctors today focus only on symptomatic relief, at Andover Spine Center the focus is in actual correction of spinal/postural misalignments. The corrections that are achieved are shown by comparing pre and post x-rays.

Dr. Christopher R. Condon received his Doctor of Chiropractic (D.C.) degree from the world's largest chiropractic school, Life University in Marietta, Georgia. Dr. Condon was an active member of the school's study club, Chiropractic Biophysics (CBP) and was an author of several articles on healthcare. Dr. Condon was the Editor-in-Chief of the university's school newspaper, The Elan Vital. While editor, Dr. Condon authored dozens of articles covering topics ranging from the study of various techniques to nutrition and exercise. Furthermore, also while a student, Dr. Condon used his experiences in patient education to publish an instructional manual for his fellow classmates in examining methods for better practice management and communication techniques. Due to clinical excellence, he was able to complete his clinical rounds while still in school, one year ahead of schedule.

In June 2000, Dr. Condon opened his first office, Andover Spine Center. Currently he is the owner and director of the clinic and is the chief doctor in the office completing thousands of patient examinations, x-rays and office visits, personally, every year since the opening of the clinic. By 2004, Dr. Condon had established himself as one of the busiest chiropractic physicians in the Merrimack Valley and one of only approximately 15% of all practicing chiropractors to specialize in non-surgical spinal corrective care. Eliminating scoliosis, hump-back deformities, forward head carriage, etc., are the hallmark skills Dr. Condon offers his patients. Also, as a dedicated and enthusiastic fitness consultant, Dr. Condon uses his own experiences in athletics and bodybuilding to teach patients how to exercise and eat properly to enhance their spinal corrective care.

Dr. Condon's corrective care techniques have changed the lives of hundreds of patients – including some who come from across the globe to experience the miracle of non-surgical spinal correction. In just over four years of private practice, Dr. Condon has been responsible for eliminating more than just headaches, neck pain and back pain. Patients with the most severe, debilitating disc herniations, sciatica, migraines, tremors/seizures, hump-back deformities, etc., have been cured and made much healthier.

Some patients have even been cured of conditions such as insomnia, constipation, infertility and depression to name a few. The special, targeted approach to spinal rehabilitation and increasing nerve-conduction has helped create the miracles of life that Dr. Condon believes are the destiny of all people.

Dr. Condon is a member of the American Chiropractic Association, International Chiropractic Association, Massachusetts Chiropractic Society, Massachusetts Society for Chiropractic Philosophy, Merrimack Valley Chamber of Commerce, and National Vaccine Information Center.

Professional musicians like the Monkees and athletes such as Felix Potvin of the Boston Bruins have sought out Dr. Condon's care for optimum health and performance. See why they and others have begun to incorporate chiropractic care into their lifestyle by seeking out the highly regarded hands-on techniques offered by Dr. Condon at Andover Spine Center.

Graduation 2005

Mortarboards fly as Andover High School seniors celebrate the end of their high school years, at a graduation ceremony on Monday in Lowell's Tsongas Arena.

A Call for Courage

Bike-riding principal has message for 377 Andover High graduates

By Rita Savard

Rumbling through the Andover High School commencement ceremony, the rough vibrations of a chopper's exhaust pipe caught the crowd's attention.

Except when 2,000 spectators turned their heads, it wasn't a motorcycle they were looking at.

"You will know when the moment hits you. It will be gnawing inside you. Then you either exercise courage or you walk away."

PRINCIPAL
PETER ANDERSON

As the revving engine thundered over the speaker system, Principal Peter Anderson pedaled his way into the Lowell Tsongas Arena on a bicycle. He carried a "2005" banner and a message of courage for 377 graduating seniors.

Prior to Anderson's entrance, senior Leslie Willey spoke to her classmates about their four-year journey through a world of change. Almost all the seniors were freshmen in classes at Andover High on the day the World Trade Center towers collapsed under terrorist attacks. Willey said Anderson's voice echoing over the school's intercom, informing students about the tragedy, was a moment that would resonate with them for the rest of their lives.

Willey urged fellow seniors to be moved by each of their life's encounters.

"Paved roads or rocks, deserts or mountains offer so much in many different ways," Willey said. "We are prepared. Run hard, run fast. Amaze people by your speed, but never forget how much the first step matters."

Superintendent Claudia Bach congratulated the class of 2005 for outperforming students statewide. Bach told graduates that AHS was the only suburban high school of 12 the state recognized and awarded for standards of excellence based on student achievements.

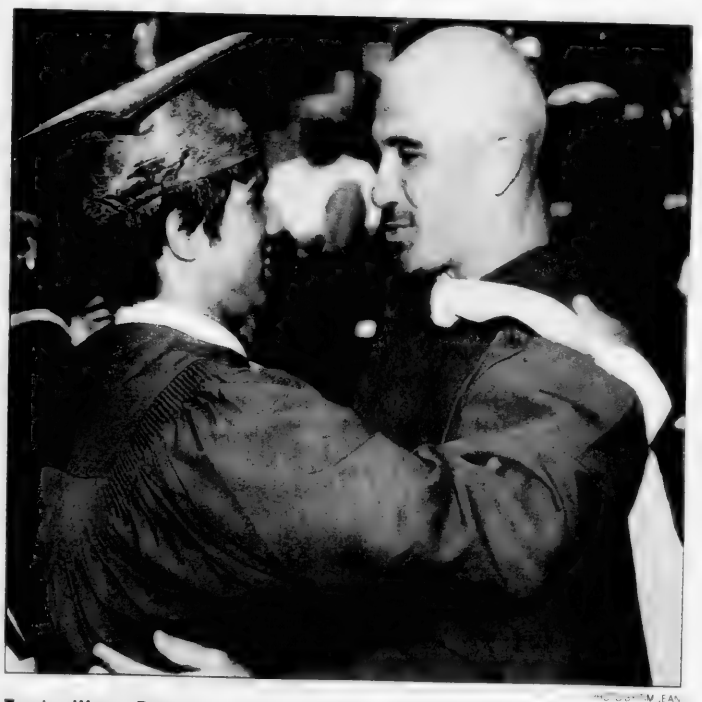

Bach, who plans to attend her own high school reunion in Ohio after the school year, said that while graduation speeches tend to fade from memory, a powerful sensory experience triggered by sights, smells, sounds and the faces of close friends remains vivid.

"The influence my classmates had (on who I've become) is far greater than anything else," Bach said. "Nurture your friendships. In them you will carry powerful connections that will influence you for the rest of your lives."

While Bach said graduation speeches are not always the most memorable part of graduation day, some students and faculty who gave up their shoes because of one speech might disagree.

Drawing on examples from real-life heroes, Principal Anderson discussed different degrees of selflessness.

SENIOR SAFARI

Dancing – and bull riding – the night away

New graduates Caitlin Jackson and Conor Rice learn a new dance at Senior Safari, an all-night party on graduation night inside Andover High School's Field House.

By Lauren Underhill

Hundreds of 2005 graduates flocked to the AHS field house Monday night, eagerly awaiting admittance to Senior Safari, a drug-free, all-night party where seniors celebrated with their classmates until 5 a.m.

"Sally-O, I'm sober!" one student shouted to Spanish teacher and senior class adviser Sally O'Brien as he shook her hand.

Keeping students in that condition is the idea of the event. Senior Safari is designed to give now-former students a great sendoff on their graduation night, while promoting a fun, but safe environment.

The attendance by 338 of 377 seniors this year again proved the success of the annual Safari.

After entering Senior Safari's papier maché jungle, students ran around making appointments for massages, haircuts, makeovers, and psychic readings. While waiting for appointments they could play arcade games, drink at a tropical fruit smoothie bar, eat free pizza and Chinese food, get fake tattoos, pose for caricature drawings, sign yearbooks, run through inflatable obstacle courses and even ride a "bungee bull" that whipped students off its back within seconds.

The only station unoccupied was the "quiet area."

"This is amazing! I can't believe this is the field house," senior Laurel Ridge said.

Volunteers worked eight-hour days this past Saturday and Sunday to create an event that would leave students like Ridge in awe. Massive vines hung from ceiling palm trees and even a replica swamp helped create the jungle-like atmosphere.

After enjoying the jungle, students headed to the gymnasium to enjoy a hypnotist show while volunteers began the extensive clean up project.

Although the activities were a hit, senior Dave Eulie said it was "all about the people" and everyone would have had a blast even if the field house was empty.

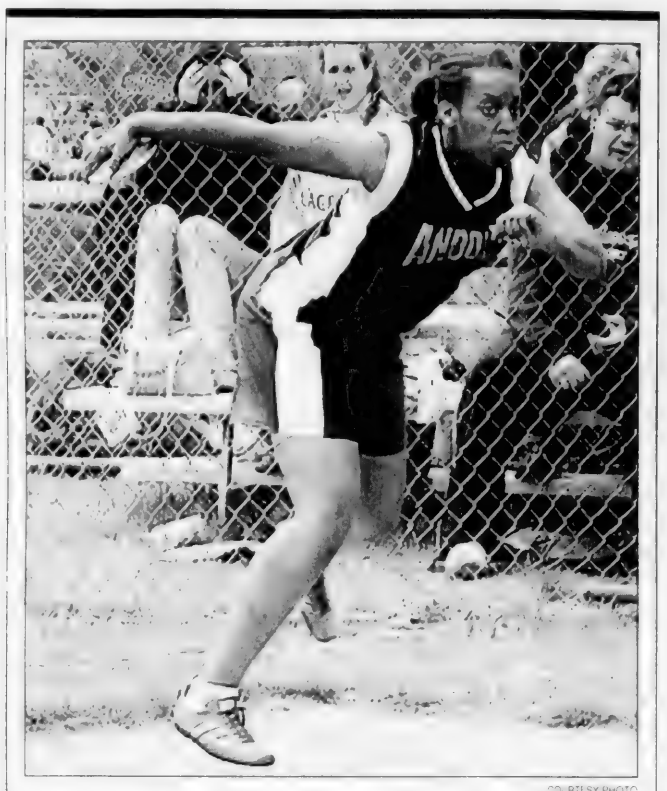

Dan Murphy said his favorite activity was the inflatable obstacle course. "I've gone on like

Her reach in the classroom, in the community and as a record-setting discus thrower had many colleges throwing offers at Felicia Thompson.

Felicia Thompson

This eagle will land at Howard

By Rita Savard

Track and field coaches say one word comes to mind when they see Felicia Thompson: Olympian.

At five feet and seven inches tall, Thompson's 6-foot arm span is longer than her 5'7" frame, a rare characteristic that has helped her become a dominant state athlete.

"She was tall and strong with tremendous speed and agility, a pure discus thrower, " says AHS head track and field coach Peter Comeau, recalling his first impression of her.

Spreading apart her arms, Thompson laughs when she says coaches "pushed me into throwing events right away."

The school's No. 1 discus thrower even as a freshman, Thompson, 17, has honed her abilities and technique. Discus throwers must learn to rotate quickly and know precisely when to release the metal rimmed object as they spin. Thompson's long arms add a final push, acting like a whip.

Last month, Thompson sent jaws dropping when she broke Andover High's discus-throw record, hurling the object 132 feet 11 inches. The previous record of 128 feet had been held by Karen Hodkinson since 1980.

"To break that record was tremendous," Comeau says. "She has all the elements, physically and mentally, to become the state champion and then (the regional) champion."

Besides awing spectators at the track, Thompson also gained attention on the basketball courts – while incognito. For a couple of seasons, she donned the eagle-mascot suit at boys and girls basketball games, rallying school spirit. A children's coach, Thompson says her previous job at Andover Costume in Lawrence prepared her for the mascot role.

"I never thought I'd be dressed as a hotdog, standing on the sidewalk and waving at cars. But there I was," she says. "Wearing the eagle suit at games was fun, but it could be traumatizing. It gets pretty hot underneath there and people will keep bumping into you a lot. And once you take your head off it can confuse smaller kids, and even make them cry."

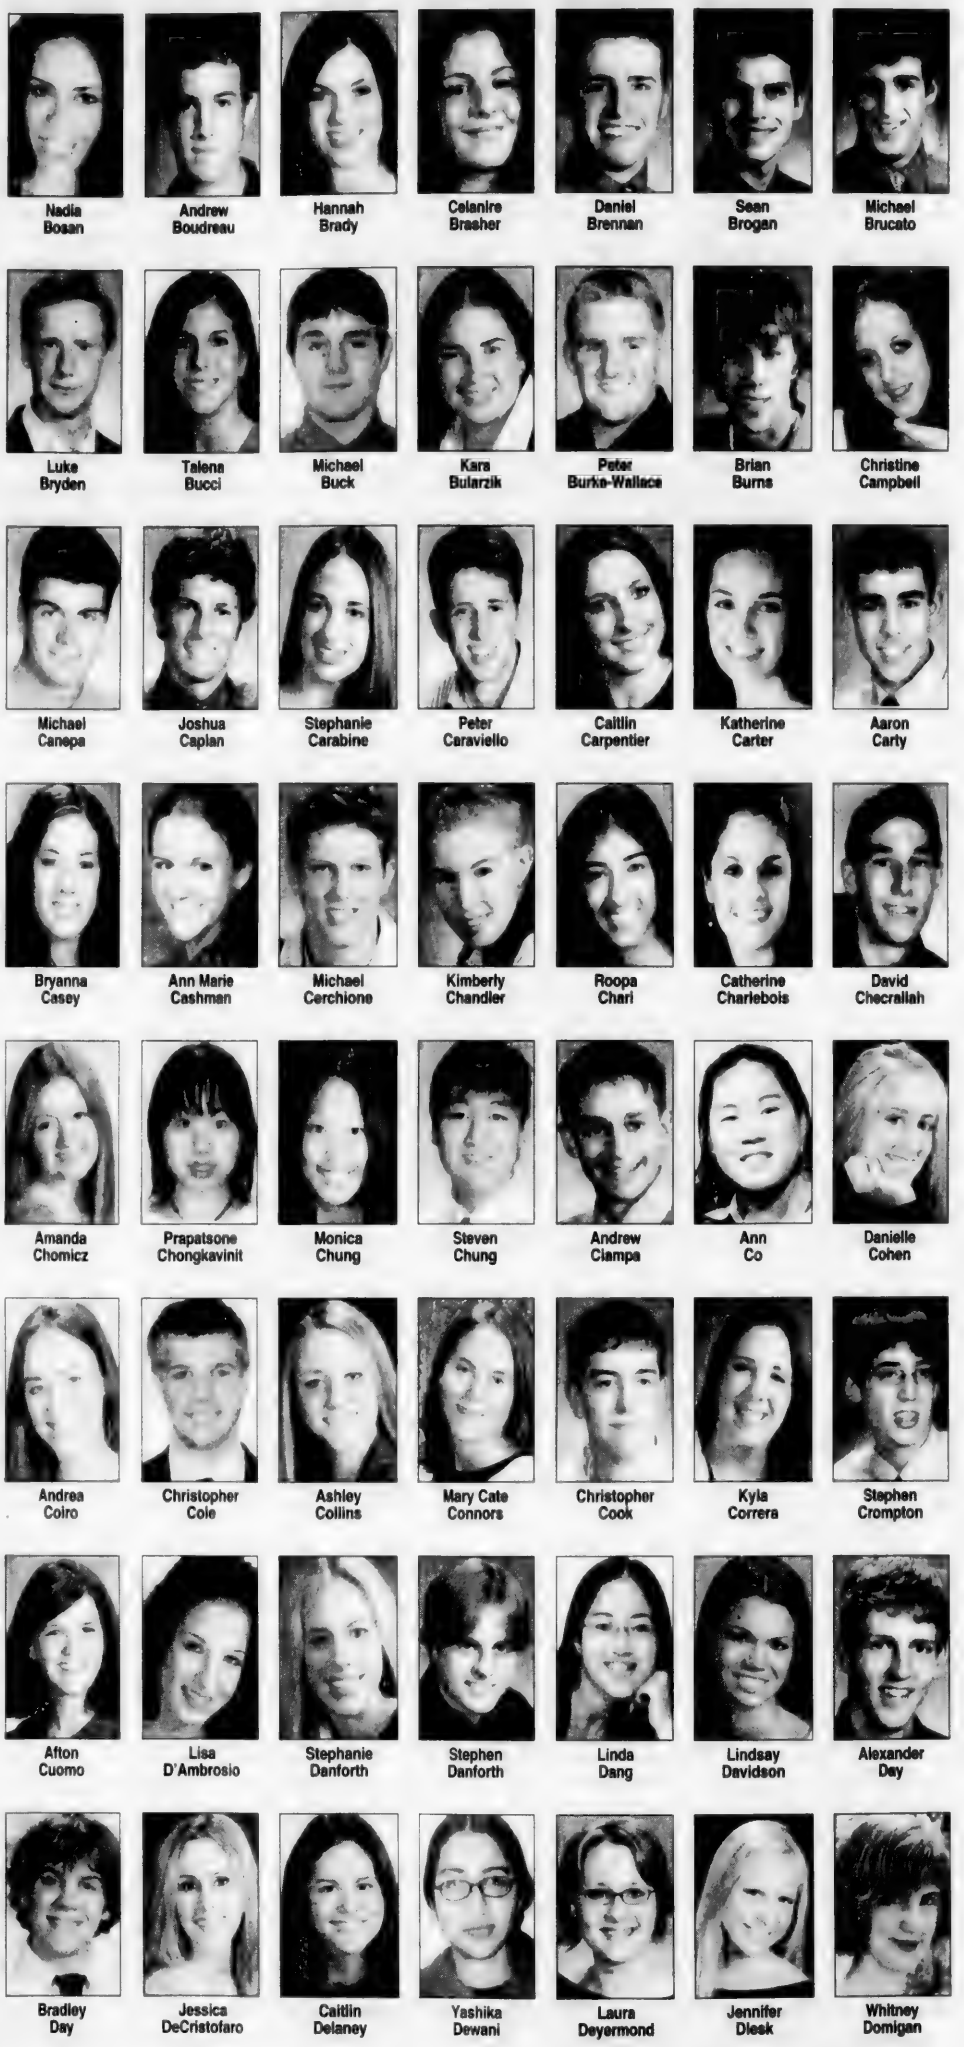

Her academic record – combined with school activities, such as captaining the girls track-and-field team, mentoring middle-school physical-education classes, and belonging to the AHS board of directors – captured the attention of dozens of colleges and universities.

Thompson rejected offers from Harvard, Brown and Yale and chose Howard University, an historically black private university in Washington, D.C.

"For the next four years I want to be the majority, not the minority," says Thompson, adding that her family refers to Howard as the "black Harvard." "I want to learn to be a successful black female from other minorities that have succeeded in their lives."

Expressing her fondest affections for Andover, Thompson adds she will carry her valuable high school experiences with her.

"As long as you surround yourself by good experiences and positive people, you can succeed," she says. "It's OK to make mistakes but if we learn from them, those temporary bad moments will just be temporary."

ANDOVER HIGH SCHOOL CLASS OF 2005

At age 7, Taiwanese immigrant Stephen Sun had taken apart and reassembled a computer for fun.

STEPHEN (SHISHAUN) SUN

Coming to America

By Greta Cuyler

Until the year 2000, almost everything Stephen (Shishaun) Sun knew about American life he gleaned from dubbed Discovery and Disney Channel shows in Taiwan.

Things changed when he moved to the US from Taiwan, by himself, at 14 years old.

Sun says his mother, discouraged by a memorization-based curriculum in Taiwan, hoped he would receive a better education in America.

Soon after arrival, Sun plunged into English immersion classes at the American Language Academy in New York. As the only Mandarin Chinese-speaking student, Sun learned English quickly. "A blessing in disguise," he says in hindsight.

In 2001, he joined his mother and sister who had relocated to Andover.

Enrolling at Andover High School was a pleasant surprise – especially compared to what he had seen about high schools in American movies. "People are actually much nicer than I see in films. In Mean Girls, beautiful girls are so mean to each other. The football team is always beating people up," he says.

Not that high school was a fairy tale. Enrolled in enrichment courses, Sun felt ill-prepared to grasp the scientific and medical terms he encountered in his course work.

Plus, he felt an outsider in a community where his classmates had known each other for 15 years. "I first stayed in the ESL room to eat my lunch," he says, but as freshman year came to a close, school life improved as his language and social circle expanded.

Sun has a passion for all things mechanical. At age 7, he took apart and reassembled a computer. At 8, a television. "I really like machinery and how things work. I like taking things apart and putting them back together," he says.

Sun plans to enroll at Lehigh University in Pennsylvania in the fall and hopes to study mechanical engineering.

His future plans include yet another major relocation. "I think I'll stay in the US for the next 20 years and then maybe go visit Russia or live there. I'm totally obsessed with the people, language, arts and the military achievements of the Cold War," he says.

Excited for college, Kristen Pinksten admits she also is sad to put behind her the familiarity of Andover High, where she was a leader.

Kristen Pinksten

Peers dub her 'future president'

By Lauren Underhill

On Valentine's Day, seniors bought chocolate roses. During the December holidays they swapped gifts with secret givers. Seniors could purchase class of 2005 T-shirts.

And they were able to do these things – and more – because of the work of Kristen Pinksten and other members of the senior class board of directors. Such offerings helped raise money to support other senior activities, and, more importantly, says Pinksten, brought students together as part of the Andover High School community.

Pinksten was also a Growing Up Taking a Stand and a Students Against Destructive Decisions board member, a student mentor, vice president of National Honor Society, a volleyball player and a prom queen. But she said she is most proud of her experiences working with the senior class board, the new form of student government at Andover High.

Pinksten was picked by her peers as the Andover High female most likely to be president someday.

Her organizational skills helped her captain one of this year's Powder Puff football game teams. "It was fun. I got to organize everything, design the T-shirts and organize my lovely team of ladies," she said.

Powder Puff was one of Pinksten's fondest memories at AHS, along with both her junior and senior proms.

Being selected as prom queen last year was "really important to me because it showed that I was respected and admired by both my peers who nominated me and teachers who did the final vote," she said. "Prom queen at AHS isn't the stereotypical massive deal that it is at other schools, but it was still really neat to have that honor."

This summer, Pinksten will work at Nazarian Jewelers for her third summer before she heads to Washington, D.C. to attend Georgetown University and study business. She knew Georgetown was exactly what she was looking for when she visited it after attending a leadership conference in the capital last summer.

Although excited to move on, Pinksten says she will miss her friends, family and those who helped guide and influence her throughout high school. Pinksten, who has attended Andover schools since kindergarten, says she will miss the familiarity of knowing the names and faces of both students and teachers at the high school.

Whether on the Collins Center stage or putting animation on screen, Joey Abisso has shown a creative flair.

JOEY ABISSO

Animated future awaits

By Judy Wakefield

This senior truly is No. 1.

With a last name that begins "Ab," Joey Abisso was the first Andover High School senior to get his diploma Monday night.

But it's not his name that puts Abisso among the first when it comes to the Andover limelight. Voted most theatrical by his peers, he was super-involved with a variety of Andover High drama productions. He was Cogsworth in Beauty and the Beast, cousin Kevin in Tommy, and also appeared in Little Shop of Horrors and Les Miserables. When he's not a key performer on stage, he's been behind the camera or working on some of his own screenwriting. This should help prepare him for New York University's Manhattan campus where he will study film and animation next year.

"I've got a lot of passions," explains the affable 17-year-old, who wowed people at the Mr. AHS competition last school year with a five-minute routine during which he talked to an animated version of himself on a screen behind him. His micromedia presentation was fun for him to create and he sees himself doing more of the same in the not-too-distant future.

An honor-roll student and avid reader, Abisso says the field of animation is a lot more sophisticated than many people realize.

"It's about innovation, and it is so much more than just Saturday morning cartoons," he says.

The famed Pixar production company that has produced a slew of successful animated movies such as Finding Nemo and Toy Story is but one of many businesses in the field.

Abisso says four years at Andover High has prepared him well for college, as he's already had a taste of editing sound, writing and producing animation. His Reel Life course exposed him to screenwriting and storyboarding, and he was thrilled to find out that AHS uses the same editing system as NYU.

Outside of school, this son of Stephen and Kathy Abisso of Farrwood Drive, also takes his spiritual side seriously, as he is active with the Free Christian Church's youth programs. During the group's most recent mission trip, youth spent several days helping to build a church in a small rural town called Guadalupe near El Paso, Texas.

"We just got the pictures of the finished church," says Abisso. "It's great to see the people so happy."

Along with fellow graduate Roopa Chari, Anthony Prochilo was voted most musical by his peers.

ANTHONY PROCHILO

He pounded out soldier's song

By Judith Bright

Senior Anthony Prochilo spent a semester following the beat of a different drum – one sounded by Andover High School Principal Peter Anderson.

Anderson offers "senior exhibition projects" to all seniors who meet graduation requirements and want to spend guided time on a project for which they have a personal passion.

Prochilo and other qualifying seniors tackled a major assignment while giving up a study hall or other non-essential classroom time. Just 35 students, less than 10 percent of those in this graduating class, took up Anderson on his offer. That might be due to the requirements, which include a detailed proposal, approval of a faculty adviser and demonstration of at least 120 hours invested in the outcome, followed by a presentation of the exhibit in a public forum. The project carries no credit.

The result in Prochilo's case was a seven-minute prerecorded performance in which he describes himself as a "one-man band."

Said Prochilo, "I performed all the parts, including a melody piece on the marimba, a futuristic theme on the synthesizer and the rhythm on the acoustic drums."

Prochilo's friend James MacLeese of Nashua, N.H. accompanied Prochilo on the marimba, a sort of large wooden xylophone. "The marimba has three and a half octaves and I wrote the piece to incorporate two performers, each playing half the range," Prochilo explained.

"The music and the narrative story are on intense topics. It's basically about a soldier in Iraq," he said. "The fear, nervousness, pain, all the sensory sounds portraying war are in it. The audience reads the narrative story ahead of the performance, and there is a sense of drama."

Prochilo began the project in February with a chord progression that he developed. The story idea was part of his proposal. He and MacLeese then improvised on the theme during a long jam session they recorded in the high school's band room. The project was presented to faculty and other guests on May 18.

Prochilo said he starting drumming just five years ago, "after years of trying to convince my parents to let me do it." He played the snare drum in the Andover High School Marching Band, serving as drum line captain for his last two years. During the summer he competes around the country with the Nashua Spartans Drum and Bugle Corps. Last year both Prochilo and the Spartans won awards on tour. This summer the group will visit 14 states and compete in at least 10 of those, said Prochilo. He also plays with a percussion group at Boston University and teaches some students in the Andover area.

Prochilo will attend the University of Massachusetts Amherst in the fall, because of its music program. But drum beats are not all Prochilo hears. He is leaning toward a business or health science major.

"If I'd wanted a purely musical education, I would have applied to music schools (such as Berklee)," he said.

Seniors celebrate end of their Andover High careers

■ GRADUATION

"Courage is the first of all human qualities because it guarantees all the others," Anderson said, reciting a quote from Winston Churchill.

Despite low grades, poor athletic skills and economic hardships, Daniel "Rudy" Ruttiger graduated from college and became a Notre Dame football legend. Sgt. Joseph Darby, now under 24-hour guard after his life has been threatened, publicized US soldiers' abuse of Iraqi inmates at Abu Ghraib prison. Journalists Robert Woodward and Carl Bernstein exposing the Watergate scandal leading to President Richard Nixon's resignation. Teachers Liv Annisen and Ann Bancroft attempt to travel across the Arctic while millions of schoolchildren followed their journey via the Internet.

Anderson laid out those stories and several others as examples of courage for students to consider and try to emulate in their lives.

Courage, Anderson said, results when conscience, fear and actions collide.

Asking two strangers in the audience to give up a dollar bill, Anderson collected the money and spoke of sacrifice.

"What if the stakes were raised?" Anderson questioned his group of wide-eyed graduates.

The principal said true courage can only occur when a sacrifice is made for something greater that personal self-interest. Then he asked some students, and some of his faculty, to give him their shoes. Anderson asked the group, that if a truck was actually waiting outside to transport their shoes to a third-world country where people urgently needed them, if they would willingly give them up.

More thought would have to go into having to decide to walk home barefoot for someone else, Anderson added.

"It would be interesting to see if we could collect 2,000 shoes to fill that truck. I won't ask you now," Anderson said. "But you will know when the moment hits you. It will be gnawing inside you. Then you either exercise courage or you walk away."

Principal Peter Anderson raced into graduation on a bicycle, while the sounds of a motorcycle engine filled the arena.

In that moment, Anderson continued, "you will be the most complete person that a human being can be and I guarantee you will know a serenity that you didn't know you could experience."

Before students said one last goodbye to Andover High, Anderson designated the title of last senior standing to Michael Muccio. The senior was chosen by faculty to receive a $1,000 gift, to be used toward positive change. One of the conditions of the award is that Muccio return in four years and speak to the class of 2009 to tell them what he has done.

"In reality you were chosen because you look most like Rudy," joked Anderson, before praising Muccio for exhibiting the kind of courage he asked students to keep in mind.

Seniors Teiko Akufo and Michael Brucato also presented the 2005 class gift to Andover High during the ceremony, announcing that two benches, one dedicated to the late special education teacher Jeffrey Valley, are being added to the high school, along with a bulletin board.

Also noted for demonstrating acts of courage, veterans service agent John Doherty was chosen by seniors to receive the Outstanding Citizenship Award, given to individuals who perform above and beyond the call to community service.

After overseeing the town's major ceremonies, funerals and events, students said Doherty still finds the time to write to soldiers in Iraq and make sure every veteran's grave is marked with an American flag – a task "that many would otherwise forget to do."

six times!" he said.

The corner of the field house boasted a full beauty salon. Senj Salon, Techniques Beauty Salon, and Chez Pierre volunteered their time for the event. Eric Howard from Senj said it is a good way to give back to the community and has been doing it for nine years now.

Over by the salon corner, volunteer Susan Buckley, who kept the massage line moving along, said she has done the event a few years now. Even after both her children graduated, she continues to come back to contribute and have fun.

"Parents of underclassmen are instrumental in making sure this tradition continues, as they make up a high percentage of the volunteers and are the only ones allowed to chaperone during the actual event," Kathy Abisso said.

High Plain Elementary School's physical education teacher Beth Schiff said she has been volunteering for 10 years now.

"The excitement of seeing the kids keeps me coming back. It's as fun for me as it is for them," she said. Unlike many of the volunteers who stay for three-hour shifts, Schiff chooses to stay the whole night. She enjoys seeing the kids she taught years before.

"I'm sad to leave, but this is a perfect ending," Dave Eulie said. It was the perfect ending to a great school year and to a successful Senior Week for most of the graduates.

O'Brien said they were lucky with the Senior Week weather. Last Tuesday's thunderstorms held off until 3:30 p.m. during their day at Six Flags.

Seniors were able to enjoy last Wednesday at Eastover, an indoor and outdoor facility where they had a variety of activities to choose from. There was softball, football, golf, shuffle board, tennis, horseback riding, and volleyball among other things. Both indoor and outdoor pools were open and "some crazies went in the outside pool, but not for long," O'Brien said.

Each year, most seniors dub Eastover their favorite Senior Week experience. Caitlin Toland said it was her favorite because there was so much to do and the whole class hung out together. "A good bonding experience," she said.

"Horseback riding blew my mind," Evelyn Wang, who had never been on a horse before, said.

As night drew in at Eastover, students enjoyed a barbecue in pine trees and gathered at the Tally Ho Lounge for their last high school dance. Here they got a surprise as classmates Garrett Rayner, Brian Hseih, Alex Seletsky and Alex Perry performed to an NSYNC song.

Senior week also included a lobster and clam bake on Thursday and lunch at DiBurro's on Friday.

Recent graduates enjoyed a number of activities during their substance-free, all-night graduation party at the Andover High School Field House on Monday.

FOR THE KID IN YOU
Newspapers In Education

Don't panic during travels

"Space is big. Really big. You just won't believe how vastly hugely mind-bogglingly big it is. I mean, you may think it's a long way down the road to the chemist, but that's just peanuts to space."

That's what "The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy" had to say when the Kid checked on taking a journey to space.

The Kid also learned from the "Guide" that you can't breathe in space. He decided against space as one of the stops on his summer journey. Plus, he found the fictional space in the Guide more fun than real space.

"The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy" is a funny journey through the universe. It features Arthur Dent, a man from Earth. Arthur's friend Ford Prefect is an alien who writes for an encyclopedia and travel guide called "The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy." Other funny characters include Zaphod Beeblebrox, the two-headed President of the Galaxy, and Marvin, the depressed robot.

The story was written by British author Douglas Adams. It was first performed as a radio show in 1978. It later became a bestselling series of books and a television series. Adams died suddenly of a heart attack in 2001 while writing the script for the movie. The movie version debuted in April.

The funny hitchhiker character on the left is from a bookjacket for "The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy." The movie poster is shown on the right.

Fans of all ages love the "Guide." A whole new group is enjoying the "Guide" with the release of the movie.

The story begins with the end of the world. Aliens called Vogons destroy Earth to make room for a space highway. Arthur and Ford stow away on a Vogon ship to escape. They are captured and forced to listen to Vogon poetry. (Vogon poetry is the third worst poetry in the galaxy according to the Guide.)

Arthur finds himself caught up in all sorts of adventures.

Written on the cover of the "Guide" is "Don't Panic." Arthur must learn to follow that advice to survive.

At first he is scared by all the new and amazing things he encounters in space. As the story goes on, Arthur gains confidence. He learns that he can deal with any situation in the universe with the help of his friends and a little advice from the "Guide."

As the Kid travels around the globe this summer, he plans to use some of the traveling lessons he learned from the "Guide."

If you are home this summer, you can still share in great trips. Follow the Kid around the globe in your newspaper. Take a trip to the library and check out great adventures around the globe. Try "The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy" for an out-of this world adventure. And above all, don't panic.

Phillips Academy's class of 2005 has 154 boys, 154 girls

By Tana Sherman
Director of public information,
Phillips Academy

In Phillips Academy's 227th commencement ceremony, filled with tradition and jubilation, 308 seniors – 154 boys and 154 girls – graduated Sunday, June 5.

About 3,000 people attended the graduation exercises, which took place in front of Samuel Phillips Hall on the school's Great Lawn.

In a time-honored Andover tradition, the graduation procession of faculty and students was led by the stirring sounds of the Clan MacPherson Pipes and Drums of Lawrence. Boys wore suit coats and ties; girls wore white dresses, and each carried a red rose.

Sunday's celebration followed a weekend of commencement events, including a senior-faculty banquet, a senior concerto concert and a candlelight baccalaureate service Saturday evening in Cochran Chapel.

In her commencement address to the graduates, Barbara Landis Chase, head of school, discussed the lessons contained in a time capsule that will be placed in the foundation of the Memorial Bell Tower, currently being reconstructed on campus. The capsule will be opened in 2055, at the 50th reunion of the class of 2005. "The contents can be looked at as symbols of what you experienced here on Andover hill, as reminders of the skills and knowledge and understanding you gained," she said. "Those things, unlike the objects themselves, will have endured, immune to the vagaries of fashion."

Chase talked about the significance of some of these objects:

• The Phillipian and student literary publications – "Appreciate the power of words. Use them to elevate the dialogue around you, to illuminate the landscape of life, to change minds and hearts."

• Photos of staff members – "Remember to respect all kinds of work and the people who do it."

• Class schedule – "The learning that occupied those neatly-framed spaces will have remained and will have formed the foundation for years more of accumulating knowledge and understanding."

• The Face Book directory – "Youth from every quarter, you have all brought talent and motivation and humanity. As Andover graduates living and working in every quarter, may you fight for inclusion and create opportunity for others."

"Remember all the things in that box and what they stand for," she concluded, "so that when you stand at life's inevitable crossroads – between hard work and ease, hope and despair, principle and expediency, sacrifice and selfishness, love and hate – you will be able to call to your mind's and heart's eye the image of the Bell Tower."

School President Daniel B. Adler '05 of Hunting Valley, Ohio, also spoke with eloquence to his classmates. "Andover has helped us understand the balance between pride and humility," he said. "We're ready to take the next step, proud of what we've accomplished and humbled by the experience."

Chase announced major prizes awarded to outstanding members of the graduating class:

Alexander S. Lebow of Newton, Mass, received the Non Sibi Award, given to the student who has honored Phillips Academy's non sibi (not-for-self) tradition through efforts on behalf of others. He will attend the University of Southern California.

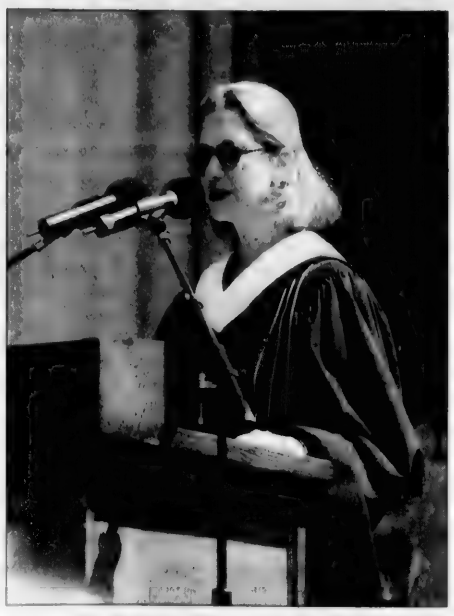

Katherine K. Dix of Andover received the Yale Bowl, given to the member of the senior class who has attained the highest proficiency in scholarship and athletics. She will attend the University of Pennsylvania.

Emma E. Wolman of Andover received the Faculty Prize for outstanding scholarship during the senior year. She will attend Swarthmore College.

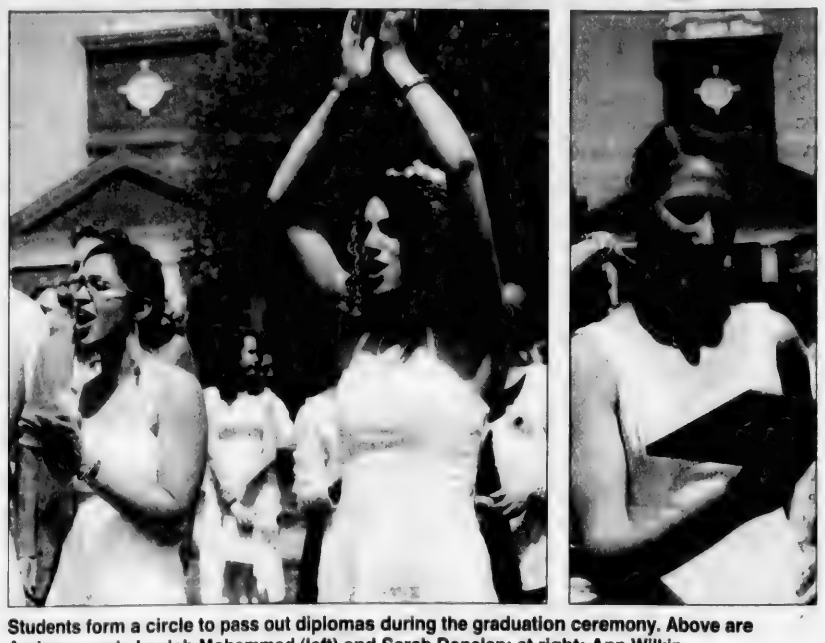

Morissa G. Sobelson of Concord, N.H., received the Madame Sarah Abbot Award, given to a young woman for strong character, leadership and outstanding scholarship. She will attend Tufts University.

Daniel B. Adler of Hunting Valley, Ohio, received the Aurelian Honor Society Award for sterling character, high scholarship and forceful leadership. He will attend the University of Michigan.

The Phillips Academy class of 2005 will matriculate at a total of 97 four-year colleges and universities. Top choices, accounting for almost 40 percent of the class, include: University of Pennsylvania, 17; Cornell, 15; Brown and Georgetown; 13 each; Harvard, 12; Columbia, University of Southern California, Vanderbilt and Yale, 9 each; Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Princeton, 7 each.

Straumann inaugurates new North American headquarters

Straumann, a Switzerland-based producer of dental implants and leader in dental tissue regeneration products, held a special event to launch its new North American headquarters in Andover, yesterday, Wednesday.

The event inaugurated its new combined North American headquarters, training and production center. The 63,000 square foot site "houses Straumann's North American management team and a world-class training center with two dental operation suites. It also incorporates a state-of-the-art production and development unit to manufacture high precision implants for tooth replacement," says the company. The Andover facility complements Straumann's production unit in Villeret, Switzerland.

Briggs: ENHC commissioner

The Essex National Heritage Commission recently held its semi-annual meeting and appointed nine new commissioners to three-year terms.

One of these new commissioners is Martha O. Briggs of Andover, acting director of the Merrimack Valley Preservation Group located in Haverhill.

Clinician of the Year

Andover resident Paul J. Spieler, an oncologist in the Haverhill office of Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology, was recently recognized as Clinician of the Year by the Essex North Chapter of the Massachusetts Medical Society (MMS). The recognition is awarded to an "unsung hero" in the community, a doctor who is dedicated to clinical excellence and is held in high esteem by patients and colleagues.

Paul Spieler

"Dr. Spieler is dedicated to providing outstanding community care, and he has enriched the lives of his patients," said Dr. Pedro Sanz-Altamira, president of the Essex North Chapter of MMS.

Spieler, who specializes in medical oncology and hematology, is affiliated with Anna Jaques Hospital, Merrimack Valley Hospital, Caritas Holy Family Hospital and Lawrence General Hospital. Board-certified in medical oncology, hematology and internal medicine, he previously was a research associate and a fellow in oncology at Yale University School of Medicine. He was also a fellow in hematology at New York University Medical Center, and a chief resident, resident and intern in New York V.A. hospital.

Spieler received an M.D. from New York University School of Medicine and an A.B. from Harvard University in Cambridge, Mass. He is a member of the American Society of Hematology, the American Society of Clinical Oncology and the Massachusetts Medical Society.

Reilly says state must halt its slide

By Greta Cuyler and Dorian Block

Higher housing costs and slow job growth spell trouble for Massachusetts' future, state attorney general and 2005 gubernatorial candidate Tom Reilly told Andover business leaders.

Speaking at the Andover Chamber of Commerce's annual breakfast and community service awards last Thursday, June 2, Reilly expressed concern over the state's future.

"The best asset we have is our motivated and highly educated workforce," said Reilly. But large numbers of college educated people between the ages of 25 and 35 have left the state over the past six years.

"We're the only state that's lost population," Reilly said. "They're voting with their feet and they're leaving."

He told the story of an MIT graduate who took a job in Boston and lived in the area with his family. Offered a lateral transfer to North Carolina, the young man jumped at the opportunity to have twice the house at half the cost, along with excellent colleges nearby.

"He was gone, absolutely gone," Reilly said.

"If we continue on this course, slowly over time we will slip as a top tier state known for excellence into a mid-level state," he said.

Reilly's solution? Encourage employers to come to Massachusetts to take advantage of the motivated, highly educated and entrepreneurial workforce. Massachusetts should also continue to be on the "cutting edge" of the nation's stem cell research effort, he said.

"We have to make a choice whether we are going to be bold," he said. "This type of research (embryonic stem cell research) is on the cutting edge. It should take place in Massachusetts ... and thanks to the legislature it will take place in Massachusetts."

The Chamber breakfast honored Democratic state Sen. Susan Tucker with its annual community service award. Tucker represents Andover, Dracut, Lawrence and Tewksbury on Beacon Hill.

Andover Health Director Everett Penney and Planning Director Steve Coyler were also honored for their many years of service to the town of Andover. Both plan to retire next year.

"The governor can knock public employees all he wants, but if he saw those two, I think he'd hang his head in shame," said Tucker.

Four high school seniors and Andover residents received $250 scholarships from the Chamber: Manasa Kamineni from Andover High School, Andrea Faris from Central Catholic, Samantha Paskal from Phillips Academy and Shawn Daly from Greater Lawrence Technical School.

Summer sessions at Professional Center for Child Development

By Greta Cuyler

With names reminiscent of a curriculum that seems part Mrs. Piggle-Wiggle and part Dr. Benjamin Spock, the Professional Center for Child Development in Andover is offering five-week summer sessions for children ages 3 to 7.

Course offerings include Fun Food for Picky Eaters, Handwriting without Tears, Sensory Fun & Language Development, Learning through Literature and Social Skills and Language Development.

The sessions begin during the week of July 11 and each class costs $200.

Although the center's primary focus is serving children with special needs, it welcomes more typical community children into the classroom every summer. In addition to the summer offerings, the center also offers two-by-two programs during the school year, which pair regular-education children side by side with special needs children.

According to Veryl Anderson, the center's executive director, the integrated classes during the school year are a realistic microcosm of the world. "It sets the typical child up for society the way it is," she said, adding, "balance is good for us too, so we don't lose perspective on typical children."

A 3-year-old plays in a group at the Professional Center For Child Development.

The center serves as the region's early intervention center as mandated by the state. Now celebrating its 32nd year in Andover, the center's jurisdiction recently expanded and now stretches from Lowell to Gloucester in the north, and to Cambridge and Danvers in the south.

There are 75 full- and part-time employees at the center, including certified developmental educators, child psychologists, registered physical and occupational thereapists, speech pathologiests, psychiatric social workers therapists, nutritionists, bilingual support staff and consulting pediatrician and administrative staff.

Anderson touts her teaching staff, describing them as "much more qualified than you find in most preschools."

Teachers across the region benefit from the center's expertise. Training programs there are designed to highlight the signs of developmental delays or deficiencies and help teachers identify opportunities for improvement.

Aimee Phleger paints with a 2-year-old boy in a 2 by 2 Play Group. During the summer, the Andover-based center offers integrated programs.

"We provide a valuable resource for the town with our services," Anderson said.

Local high school and college students have volunteered at the center over the years, she says, either of their own accord, to fulfill a community service requirement or for professional practicum training. Schools represented include Philips Academy, UMass Lowell, Simmons College, Boston University and University of New Hampshire.

"The experience," says Anderson, "expands their life. It's worth our time. We put quality people out there."

The agency operates via several funding sources, including federal, state, city and town funds, private donations, third party contributions, fund-raising and grants.

NEW FIRE TRUCK

Bells, whistles – and an exothermic cutting torch

Outfitted with a 150-foot ladder, a 20,000-watt generator and an exothermic cutting torch, Andover's newest fire truck seems straight out of a Hollywood blockbuster.

Arriving in town last Tuesday, the fire department's second ladder truck took 16 months to design and build, and cost $600,000. Voters approved funding the new truck at last year's Town Meeting to replace a rusting Mack 1982 ladder truck that was riddled with holes and described as a safety hazard.

The new truck, according to Fire Chief Chuck Murnane, is unique since it was tailored to the town's needs by Andover firefighters.

"This is an example of a truck being designed by the people who run it," said Murnane. "We are moving more into a rescue mode and when we get out onto the highways, we're going to have the tools to perform more timely and efficient rescue operations."

State and federal grants have also aided in replacing some of the department's 25-year-old rescue equipment with updated technology.

Firefighter Jim Landry, a 29-year veteran of the Andover Fire Department, said the truck's generator has more electrical power than most homes, making it unusual even for a fire department vehicle. It will be an asset on the scene of nighttime car accidents and fires, he said. Air chisels and the jaws of life will help the department to better free victims trapped inside cars, Landry added.

The truck is expected to be completely equipped with newer and more efficient safety devices by July 2.

Ladder 2 will be on display this Saturday in front of Town Offices from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. for anyone interested in "climbing aboard," Murnane said.

A brook ran through it, at the Park

Bill Dalton

There is a stone bridge that sits in the middle of the Park. The stonework matches the bandstand that sits several yards away. The bridge was built about 1905, a few years before the bandstand.

I have picture of my Aunt Frances leaning against the bridge when she was in her teens. She is pretty with long hair, and she appears bubbly and light like the brook you can see in the picture; the bridge is a nice contrastive. That must have been 1916 or so. The bridge was really a bridge then, and the brook flowed under it. The brook was called Roger's Brook, and it was named after an Indian who lived on land near the brook in the 17th century.

When I was growing up, we town kids all knew the brook was named after Roger the Indian, as we referred to him. Sometimes we'd look for arrowheads and once or twice we found stones that looked like arrowheads and we pretended they were even though we knew they weren't. We used to walk up Roger's Brook and follow it to its source, which was Rabbit's Pond behind the Andover Inn. We also used to walk down the brook but that wasn't as much fun because the brook disappeared under the center of town.

Roger's Brook was in my backyard when I grew up. Our house was on the southeast corner of Chestnut and Whittier Streets - it's still there. The brook was a stinky little trickle when it shrunk up in dry months, but it was fun when it flooded. It flooded a lot when I was young. Sometimes it flooded at the very end of winter when the deep snow was melted by a long hard rain. Sometimes it flooded from the remnants of hurricanes that soaked Andover in the 50s. We'd watch the brook rise, breach its banks and creep toward our house. A few times the water reached our cellar door on the back of the house and poured in underneath it. We'd sit in the basement when the water was about to pour in, and when it started to my father would mumble something under his breath. It wasn't a big deal, just a bit of a nuisance.

When it flooded our cellar, it overflowed its banks in the Park and flooded it. Most times it was just a little flood, but several times we were able to use a small rowboat, which we kept in the cellar. We rowed from our yard, into the park, across the bridge to the cannon and then to the hump in Chestnut Street (which is just beyond where the Andover Townsman is today). It also flooded lower Bartlett Street. I've heard stories of it flooding downtown, but I never saw that happen and don't know how it could have given the pitch of the roads. I suppose there might have been some big puddles there.

As much as the kids liked Roger's Brook, I guess some people didn't like it. In the late '60s the town took action. In my 1986 book, Local Touch I wrote about the brook saying: "For years its misdemeanors were tolerated. When the town finally did something it treated the brook as if a capital offense had occurred. It was executed and buried."

The brook was entombed and covered in the late '60s. The Park was a bit seedy then. The bandstand was in poor repair, the untrod gravel paths were getting a little weedy, the benches were old and vandalized, and trees were sparse due to the losses in the '38 and '54 hurricanes. After the brook disappeared, the Park got worse because there wasn't much reason to go there. The bridge bridged only weeds and grass; it had stones missing and looked worn out. For two more decades the Park and bridge were neglected.

In the late '80s the Park and bridge were spruced up as part of the new town-hall project that was the brainchild of town manager Ken Mahony.

Roger's Brook can still be seen if you cross Whittier Street from the most southeast section of the Park. You'll see it was made flood-proof there.

The brook entered the Park after going under Whittier Street and headed toward the right of the bandstand, curving off toward the bridge and then leaving the Park straight out toward Chestnut Street.

The Park looks good today, but I often picture what it would be like if the brook were dug up, opened, and made flood proof.

Bill Dalton, a former Andover selectman, writes from Atlanta, Ga.
